The Desert Dripping Wet. Ina Claire and Harpo. Diligent Paul Block. Pope's Talk to the World.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.

THE DESERT of Northern Arizona at 6 o'clock in the morning presents an unusual appearance. No brilliant sun rising far above the tracks. Instead, heavy clouds almost touching the ground. The desert soaked with rain. Water pouring from the hills. Green filagree covering desert sands. Fresh green cactus, sage brush and grease wood. Rain has been falling in all the desert region and heavy snow in the mountains promises good crops.

INTERESTING SIGHT inside the train, if you tire of looking through the window at nature. In her stateroom sits Ina Claire, who acts. Now on her way to the movies, she plays backgammon with Mr. "Harpo" Marx, who also acts.

The Los Angeles Examiner, boarding the train early, tells you that Ina Claire says she is living apart from her husband, John Gilbert, also a screen actor, because "there is something fascinating about separation" and, says Miss Claire:

"We are both stars and temperamental. Two such persons in the same house is bad for happiness in marriage."

ASTRONOMERS WILL tell Miss Claire that there are in the firmament stars even bigger than any in Hollywood. "Double stars" that travel through infinite space and time together happily.

ON THE TRAIN also is J. O. Jernigin, first-class flier who drove the plane that towed Capt. Hawks, today's best flier in America, from San Diego to New York, Hawks sitting in a glider.

Mr. Jernigin, who has been flying ever since he entered the war, believes that aviation is on the verge of something new and entirely different from anything ever seen before. Undoubtedly he is right. Men do not solve problems by imitating birds or other animals. They develop ideas of their own, invent new things surpassing anything that Mother Nature can do. The The present airplane is only an imitation of an eagle and does not work as well.

THE BOY in "Excelsior," whose eye beneath shone like a falchion from its sheath, was a pale imitation of Paul Block, of New York, Toledo, Pittsburgh and points east, west, north and south. He now extends his newspaper chain to the Pacific, purchasing the Los Angeles Express.

Dr. Frank Barham, publisher of the Los Angeles Herald, and George Young, of the Los Angeles Examiner, intrenched like two "old men of the mountain," will give Block a fight. But Block will make money. It is as natural for him to do that as it is for the rolling mercury to carry along small particles of gold with it. What the magnet is to iron, Block is to business and profits.

HUNDREDS OF millions listened to the Pope broadcasting Thursday. Protestants will note with deep interest, and Catholics with great pride, the fact that the Papacy reigns through the centuries.

A great German emperor crossed the Alps in the dead of winter in the Middle Ages and stood penitent in the snow day after day below the window of the Pope begging forgiveness. The Pope could not have addressed the world in tones of greater authority than those used by Pope Pius Thursday.

THE POPE spoke "in the name of the Prince of Apostles by divine command," and most impressive was the Pope's invocation:

"Hear, oh heavens, that which I shall say, and listen, oh earth, to the words of my mouth."

To the "bishops and priests and laity laboring as the apostles prescribed" the Pope said:

"You are the people of God, the royal priesthood, the holy nation."

Tens of millions of Catholics in the United States will treasure with great pride that address, full of the consciousness of earthwide authority and power.

MARRIED LADIES here are answering a newspaper question "Can you possibly raise a family on $40 a week?" One lady says it is not possible on less than $60. Another lady raises four children well on $35 a week besides paying for the arrival of the fourth, and is much praised.

Meanwhile millions of mothers continue raising families on less than $25 a week and are praised by nobody, not even their husbands.

THE CALIFORNIA grape control board deplores conditions in the grape industry, saying "more than 630,000 tons of fresh grapes were raised last year which cannot be marketed profitably" and that "hundreds of thousands of gallons of poisonous bootleg whisky are being marketed profitably" and the foolish American people swallow them.

BANDITS ROB 2 EAST END STORES

Same Gang Stages Holdups Within Brief Period; Guns Drawn on Clerks

Two Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company stores in the East End were held up and robbed this morning by the same gang of three young men, police believe.

The robbers were the first customers of the newly-opened branch at 238 South Highland avenue. They took $85 from the cash registers in the stores and from a customer.

MANAGERS SURPRISED

At the first store which the men entered, the managers, John A. Wells, Michael Karkella and Charles Minothy, and six clerks, were preparing for the opening of the establishment. They were surprised when the first three customers pointed guns at them and herded them into a rear room. The men removed $65 from the cash registers. Wells escaped through a rear door and called police, but the men had fled.

SECOND HOLDUP

While police were answering the call, the same men are believed to have held up another branch of the company at 1598 Lincoln avenue, where they employed the same tactics and obtained $15 from the cash registers. There were several customers in the store at the time, and the robbers lined them up. They took $5 from a woman, and were about to search a mailman, when the leader of the trio commanded them to stop.

The men made their escape in an automobile, according to police.

East Street Church Burns

Fire destroyed the interior of the East Street Baptist Church, East and Creek streets, North Side, at 10:30 a. m., today. The parsonage, under the same roof, was badly damaged. The pastor and his wife were forced to the street.

Eight engine companies fought the flames. Trolley and vehicular traffic was tied up for 10 blocks in each direction. Damage was estimated at $25,000.

The Rev. William L. Schoeffel, pastor, and his wife, Mrs. Georgina Schoeffel, were at breakfast when he smelled smoke. The Rev. Schoeffel found the basement in flames.

The blaze spread so rapidly that all their personal belongings and library were destroyed.

The pastor said the fire may have resulted from an overheated furnace, although no coal had been placed in it since last night.

Halt 'Sketch Book' in First Act; Chorus Girls Get Patrol Ride

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—(INS.)—Thirty-six members of the cast of Earl Carroll's "Sketch Book," arrested last night in a spectacular raid during the first act, prepared to appear today before Judge Austin F. McCarthy on charges of taking part in an indecent performance.

Twelve policemen entered the Loop theater where the production was in progress, marched down the aisles from right and left, and assembled on the stage before the footlights.

The curtain was ordered down and members of the cast heard the warrants read and were ordered to dress and were then bundled into four patrol wagons which had drawn up at the stage door. More than half of those arrested were chorus girls. Money was refunded to the audience.

Earl Carroll, producer of the show, was not in Chicago, but his brother, James, company manager, was one of those taken into custody.

In procuring the warrants, it was disclosed, Acting Deputy Police Commissioner James Scanlan made a statement that he and other police officers had witnessed several performances of the Carroll show and had taken careful notes.

Chaplin Sails for England; Plans to Visit Mikado

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Charlie Chaplin, the king of laughter, is going to Japan to meet the Emperor.

The screen comedian, who sailed for England last night, revealed to International News Service that he will visit Japan in April. He said:

"Japan and I have much in common, for it is the home of pantomime."

Chaplin has many friends among the distinguished Japanese in California, and they have urged him to visit their homeland, where he is one of the idols of the screen.

Chaplin entertained Prince and Princess Asaka on their recent visit to Hollywood. Princess Asaka is the aunt of His Imperial Majesty Hirohito, 124th Emperor of Japan.

The walls of tradition are still kept high in Japan, but Chaplin's friends are certain that the king of laughter will be asked to eat with the Emperor and perhaps be given a decoration in one of the grades of the Order of the Rising Sun.

SPAIN'S CABINET FALLS, THRONE ENDANGERED

Premier Berenguer Resigns Under Weight of Heavy Opposition; Crisis Near

MADRID, Feb. 14.—(AP.)—The government of Premier Gen. Damaso Berenguer, successor to the Primo de Rivera dictatorship, fell today, bringing to a head a crisis which appeared to be the most dangerous of any faced by King Alfonso in his long reign.

The King, accepting the resignation of Gen. Berenguer and his cabinet, cancelled parliamentary elections which were scheduled for March 1 and 15, and immediately began conferences with political leaders with a view to formation of a new cabinet.

STORM LONG BREWING

While the cabinet had been under fire for several weeks—indeed, from its very inception in January, 1930—the situation which brought its fall developed only late last night when the Count of Romanones and other important liberal monarchist leaders withdrew their support of the cabinet's election program.

De Romanones, a former premier, and the Marquis de Alhucemas, issued a statement in which they said that they would participate in the forthcoming elections because they believed that abstention would set a bad precedent, but that upon convening of the Cortes—or parliament—they would ask its dissolution and convocation of a convention to write a new Spanish constitution.

VOTE PLANS UNDER FIRE

The election program, which King Alfonso had put into decree from February 7, bringing within the immediate future a return to parliamentary rule after seven years of dictatorship and virtual dictatorship, had already been under fire from extremist elements, who had voted not to participate in the balloting.

The loss of support of the strong liberal group headed by De Romanones therefore left the government with little backing with which to proceed.

Hotel Dining Room Manager Is Dead

A heart attack caused the death early this morning of Harley R. Smith, 53, of 333 Noblestown road, a post mortem by the coroner's office disclosed today. Smith was found dead in his automobile parked at Steuben and West Carson streets. For more than 25 years he had been manager of the dining room at the Hotel Henry.

The body was found by Patrolmen C. A. Gallagher and Harry Stroup, of the West End Station. An examination at the South Side Hospital showed no evidence of foul play.

APPLICATIONS FOR RELIEF TABULATED

Maj. Matthews Urges Quick Return of Blanks Sent To Needy Unemployed

The Allegheny County Emergency Association entered today on the task of tabulating and taking care of 10,000 applications for employment for the needy of Allegheny County. The applications were mailed Thursday to persons who had applied for relief. The first returns came in yesterday.

The applications will give the committee a good idea of each person's financial needs, his responsibilities and debts and, from the employer, his abilities, according to Maj. Philip Matthews, executive chief of the committee.

Commenting upon the manner in which the applications will be handled, Maj. Matthews pleaded for prompt return of the applications. He said:

"The quicker they are returned to us, the quicker we can tabulate them. We must rush through the job of putting these persons who are so badly in need of relief that they have applied for it, to work; then we must tackle the work of taking care of those others who are out of work but haven't yet been so pressed that they have had to apply for help."

The association is asking corporations throughout the county to turn over to it checks representing one day's payroll, to further the work. On the assumption that every order for material keeps men working and puts additional men to work, it is requesting the city and county and business houses to apply funds reserved for employment on construction jobs and other work to purchase of materials; the association is preparing to supply the labor with its own funds.

NEAR-ZERO DUE HERE TONIGHT

A temperature of between 5 and 10 degrees has been forecast for the Pittsburgh vicinity for tonight, with still colder weather tomorrow, by Observer William S. Brotzman.

The forecaster said a high-pressure area was centered over Iowa and Mississippi, and probably would move east by tomorrow. He said he expected a temperature of between zero and five degrees in some parts of the district tomorrow.

The Automobile Club of Pittsburgh has reported stretches of ice on the Lincoln Highway east of Pittsburgh and on Ligonier mountain roads.

West of Pittsburgh the highway has been reported clear, with ice having been removed by the department of highways.

ORDINANCE ON BIDS IGNORED

Records Show Deals Made Without Competition; Kline Preparing Report

Quoted after a secret investigation as saying that the city's present bidding system on food contracts was "incompetent," Mayor Charles H. Kline today was collaborating with City Controller James P. Kerr in preparation of a report expected to be given City Council Monday.

Kline said "it was probable" the report would be ready at that time. Council then probably will grant John D. Houston, president of the James W. Houston Company, Pittsburgh grocers, a public hearing on his charges that Bertram L. Succop, supplies department director, showed discrimination in awarding canned goods contracts for foodstuffs for Mayview and other institutions to the highest instead of the lowest bidder.

LONE BIDDER GETS JUNK

In addition to the food controversy, Succop's methods of disposing of city junk were attracting attention today.

Although a city ordinance passed in 1928 requires advertising for competitive bids on sale of junk, no matter how small the amount, city records reveal Succop has sold materials during the past few months without such bids.

On September 4, 1930, the records disclose, the Steel City Iron and Metal Company, of which Samuel Mallinger is the head, bought one lot of scrap from Succop for $41.20 and 2,100 pounds of old iron for $10. He was the only bidder. On December 2 of the same year Mallinger purchased two lots of scrap iron for $37 in the same manner.

The ordinance was passed when John McCann, president of the United Iron and Metal Company, complained to Council that Succop was conducting private bidding sessions and showing favoritism. McCann declared Mallinger had been sold junked equipment at the

Wales Scorns Armored Car, Takes 'Rubber-Neck' Bus

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 14.—(INS.)—The Prince of Wales, who with his brother, Prince George, is making a tour of South America, preferred the "rubberneck" mode of bus travel today to the more elaborate methods of sightseeing transportation offered him by the government of Peru.

The famous armored car of former President Leguia was placed at his disposal by the government, but it merely evoked his amused interest. The heir and members of his entourage then boarded a public bus and took in the sights. Afterwards he said his first bus trip proved an enchanting and novel sensation.

COMMISSIONERS APPROVE SALE OF WABASH TUNNEL BONDS

$9,500,000 ISSUE FIXED

Tube and Bridge Work Will Take Up $4,000,000 of Total Amount Authorized

The sale of $9,500,000 in bonds to finance improvements either under way or about to be started has been approved by county commissioners. The bonds will be advertised for bids.

The issues will include $5,450,000 in commissioners' bonds and $4,050,000 in peoples' bonds. The Wabash Bridge and tunnel and the improvements necessary to make it available for motor traffic account for $4,000,000 of the commissioners' bonds.

County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher will proceed at once to draw up the necessary legal agreements for the purchase of the land and the right-of-way in the bridge and tunnel deal. There will be considerable work on the title, although no serious difficulties are expected.

Commissioners set the time the money is to be available July 1. County engineers checked over the list of going improvements, pointing out a few cases where borrowings may be delayed, resulting in economies for the county.

The Allegheny River boulevard will be ready by September 1, 1931, according to E. I. Schmidt, chief engineer of the Bureau of Roads.

Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong questioned him:

"Do you think we'll have a right-of-way by then?"

Schmidt replied:

"I'm hoping so."

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, who has frequently referred to the lack of an agreement with the Pennsylvania Water Company for boulevard right-of-way at Nadine as a "bungle," was silent. Recently it has been reported that a satisfactory agreement is near between the county and the water company.

County Studies $3,000,000 McKeesport Improvements

McKeesport improvements totaling approximately $3,000,000, including the widening of Jerome street, the raising of Fifth avenue and a new drainage system for the Crooked Run hollow will be studied by county commissioners.

If they prove most meritorious of many projects now under consideration, McKeesport may receive aid. Commissioner Joseph Armstrong told a McKeesport delegation yesterday that they could expect to hear from the board in two weeks.

The McKeesport delegation was headed by Mayor George H. Lysle and E. R. Crawford, president of the McKeesport Tin Plate Company. They expressed the opinion that McKeesport would agree to pay one-third of the total cost of the improvement. Crawford said he believed the community would approve a bond issue of $1,000,000 for the project.

E. V. Babcock and Armstrong both pointed out that McKeesport voters have been in the habit of voting against bond issues. A bond issue for the widening of Jerome street was turned down in 1925.

Commissioner Charles G. McGovern was inclined to favor the project, declaring that a large amount of taxes is paid by the citizens of the Monongahela Valley. Armstrong pointed out that 63 per cent of the county taxes are paid by Pittsburgh residents.

McGovern said:

"We have portions of the county getting improvements that don't pay a dime."

Wife Fails as Back Seat Driver; Docked city's filtration plant by Succop for $675 against a high bid of $865 submitted by the United Iron and Metal Company.

HEARING ON BIDS

At a hearing before Council Succop asserted the McCann bid came into his office two days after the award had been made — February 22, 1928. Succop was recorded in the minutes of the meeting as having said:

"McCann's bid could easily have been $2,000 as not, after he knew what his competitor's was—if he wanted to make trouble."

Asked why he had not turned over the money to the city treasurer at once, instead of holding it in his office vault until April 2, Succop said he "probably was wrong." The ordinance was passed after the hearing. Succop accused William Floyd, then an inspector for the controller's office, but now retired, of having shown favoritism to the United Iron and Metal Company.

ANNOUNCES REPORT PLAN

For more than two hours the Mayor and other officials conferred with Succop and a number of local wholesale grocers in Succop's office yesterday on the controversy over the director's method of awarding city food contracts. When the Mayor emerged he announced his intention of preparing a written report in collaboration with Kerr for presentation to Council. Grocers present at Kline's and Kerr's invitation had nothing to say after the session except one.

He was M. L. Caplan of the Caplan Grocery Company, who quoted the Mayor as telling the grocers the present bidding system was "incompetent."

WANTS OPEN BIDDING

Caplan said:

"The Mayor wants open bidding in the future to avoid stifling competition, if that has been done. The officials are not only investigating the charges, but are contemplating putting in a new system."

It is believed both the Mayor and Controller Kerr will embody recommendations to that effect in the report now in preparation. The session ended the Mayor's investigation.

Asked if he wished to comment, Council President John S. Herron said he preferred to remain silent until the Mayor's report was received.

MARITAL WOES AIRED IN SUIT

Two full hours were occupied by Attorney Samuel S. Rosenburg detailing before Judge Frank P. Patterson the charges of cruelties and indignities he has made in his divorce suit against his wife, Olive Rosenburg, 1440 Severn street. There followed another hour of cross examination, when, with Rosenburg still on the witness stand, the judge continued the hearing to next Friday.

The Rosenburgs were married November 29, 1922 and have one child. He left his wife and went to a hotel to live last October, he said, when he could stand her nagging no longer. He charged that their married life for the last few years has been punctuated frequently by outbursts from his wife. He said she called him vile names, jabbed at him with an ice pick, pointed a revolver at him, tore his clothing, insulted his clients when they called on the telephone, caused a disturbance in his office and threatened to poison him. He said:

"She tried to ruin me professionally, politically, socially and financially."

KING WANTS ALL MARINES OUT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—(INS.)—Decision by the State Department to withdraw all "combatant" Marines from Nicaragua by June 1 failed to satisfy Senator King (Dem.), of Utah, who has a resolution on the Senate calendar for complete withdrawal. King declared:

"All should come out. There is no more excuse for Marines to be in Nicaragua for election purposes than for combat purposes. Unless assurances are given that the evacuation will be complete, I will call up my resolution and proceed with my purpose to strike from the naval appropriations bill funds for maintenance of the Marines there."

It was the use of the Marines in the last election that caused Maj. Gen. Smedley Butler, fiery Marine commandant at Quantico, Va., to charge in a speech in Pittsburgh last summer that the American government, by its control of the Nicaraguan election machinery, actually controlled the result.

APPROVAL NEAR IN SENATE FOR DROUGHT AID

Filibuster by Thomas Wins Truce That May Send Bill To Conference for Change

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Overwhelming approval of the compromise $20,000,000 drought loan relief bill was expected in the Senate today under an agreement calling for final action on the Interior Department appropriation bill.

The agreement was made by administration leaders, after a long filibuster by Senator Thomas (Dem.), of Oklahoma, against a $51,000 appropriation of Oklahoma Indian tribal funds. Thomas insisted the money be appropriated from the Federal Treasury. He led so formidable a filibuster that administration leaders finally sought a compromise. If the Oklahoman can command a majority vote of the Senate, the bill will be sent back to conference to make the change he suggested.

MAY DELAY RELIEF PLAN

The compromise drought relief plan meanwhile will receive the Senate's indorsement. Its enactment will be delayed, if Thomas wins, until the controversy over the Indian funds is settled. If the Senate votes against Thomas, the Interior bill will be finally passed and sent to the House for approval.

Opposition to the drought fund practically disappeared as a result of the declaration by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, that borrowed funds could be used to buy food, clothing and medicine. A small group will vote against the measure as a protest, as no provision is made to buy food for sufferers who have no security.

WILL BOLSTER CREDIT

The new relief plan makes $20,000,000 available for re-establishing credit facilities in drought areas. At least $5,000,000 will be used to restore credit of co-operative associations and marketing groups. Even newly-organized organizations of farmers may benefit. The rest of the money will be used for outright loans on such security as satisfies the Secretary of Agriculture.

The bill offers no aid to farmers unable to raise security. As Hyde announced, such sufferers are expected to get help through the Red Cross.

When the Interior bill, with its relief fund, is finally enacted, it will be the first of the nine regular department supply bills to pass Congress. There will follow eight other departmental bills and the second deficiency bill. Fifteen legislative day remain after tonight before adjournment March 4. Defeat of a single bill would necessitate a special session.

To meet the task, administration leaders will begin night sessions in the Senate next week. They will have to deal with legislation for cashing the soldiers' bonus and a proposal to appropriate $25,000,000 outright for Federal aid for drought sufferers next summer.

Grocer's Customers To Get Eggs Free

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Eggs have become so cheap in this neighborhood that one grocer said he had decided he could afford to give away 500 dozen of them today to his customers in an effort to stimulate business. The regular retail price is 15 cents a dozen.

A laying spree by hens, due to the warm weather, was given as the reason for the low prices. In Centralia eggs sold down to 11 cents a dozen, the lowest price in 75 years.

GIRL, 10, FEARED KIDNAPED

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Clues to the fate of 10-year-old Virginia Brooks, who disappeared Wednesday, were sought by every available officer in the city today.

Police theorized the girl might have been kidnaped after she left the modest home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Brooks, swinging her books and carrying a bouquet for her teacher. She never arrived at the Euclid School, a mile and a half distant.

Officers and volunteers have combed the canyons near the Brooks home and the school to no avail. The girl's father said:

"I have no enemies. I know of no one who would want to take my little girl."

ICY SWITCHES DERAIL 3 CARS

Frozen switches this morning derailed three trolley cars in quick succession, jamming downtown traffic, and perilling scores of riders. Many cars were rerouted.

A Charleroi car was derailed at Grant street and Fourth avenue about 8:30 o'clock. It broke off a fire box at the corner. The alarm sounded, firemen rushed to the scene. A few minutes later an Overbrook-Castle Shannon car left the rails at Third avenue and Grant street. A moment afterwards a rerouted Carson street car was derailed at the same corner.

The latter two cars were quickly replaced on the tracks. It required considerable time to repair the Charleroi car. The mishaps caused scores to be late for work.

1 DEAD, 5 LOST IN CLOUDBURST

YUMA, Ariz., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—A cloudburst sent a wall of water down a canyon and through the village of Wellton, 38 miles east of here, last night, and otherwise wrought havoc in Southern Arizona. At least one person drowned and five were missing.

Rain had fallen for an hour in Wellton when the roar of rushing water was heard. Withing a few minutes a wall of water six feet high and 250 yards wide tumbled out of a canyon running from the rocky hills into the city.

The water swirled through the streets, washing away a dozen cottages, demolishing two business buildings, ripping up a mile and a half of railroad track and highway and tearing out power and telephone lines.

Automobiles caught in the first rush were carried away and wrecked. The one known victim was drowned when his car was washed into a ditch.

Missing Mrs. Stella Found in Tenement

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—(INS.)—Mrs. Myrtle Stella, wealthy widow reported missing, was safe in her home today. She was traced to a Harlem tenement boarding house through a check she attempted to cash. Mrs. Stella was returned to her home and failed to explain why she had disappeared. Valuable jewels of the widow, reported lost, were worn by Mrs. Stella when police located her.

Overbrook Blaze Loss Set at $2,000

A frame tool shed in the St. George Orthodox Cemetery, Overbrook, was destroyed by fire last night which resulted in damage estimated at $2,000. Overbrook firemen were summoned when the blaze was discovered by a resident on Horning boulevard.

BONUS FIGHT STIRRED BY MELLON

Condemnation of Bachrach Compromise Plan May Divide House Republicans

By WILLIAM S. NEAL, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's condemnation of the Bacharach "soldiers'" bonus compromise plan today threatened to split wide the Republican ranks of the House, and threw the state of the measure in doubt.

While the campaign for increase of the loan value of veterans' certificates to 50 per cent has gone too far to be dropped, the Treasury's opposition was the signal for a new drive to restrict the outlay of treasury funds in loans to veterans.

VETO POSSIBLE

The Treasury's position raised the possibility of a veto by President Hoover on the ground that the measure would impair the Treasury and slow up business recovery.

With the session ending on March 4, a filibuster could delay passage of the bill until the last 10 days of the session. President Hoover could then "pocket-veto" the bill without giving Congress a chance to pass it over his veto.

A majority of House Republicans already are pledged to the Bacharach plan, it is declared by its backers.

Speaker Longworth, indorsing the measure after it was reported out of the Ways and Means Committee yesterday, 17 to 4, was believed ready to permit passage under suspension of rules on Monday.

URGES RECONSIDERATION

The possibility of a split in the Republican ranks became a matter of concern to the administration. Thus far during the present session the House has stood steadfastly by President Hoover in his fight with the Senate.

Mellon outlined his disapproval in a letter to Representative Hawley, pointing out financial difficulties confronting the Treasury. He urged reconsideration of the proposal to place the payment of the adjusted compensation certificates on a basis which would not damage the financial position of the country.

"POTENTIAL LIABILITY"

Admitting it was possible all the veterans would not apply for the 50 per cent loan allowed in the measure, Mellon observed the bill incurs a potential liability of $1,700,000,000, while the certificate fund mounts to only $721,000,000, besides being faced with the raising of $400,000,000 to meet the loans on the certificates already presented by veterans.

The Ways and Means Committee, according to Hawley, estimated the measure would cost $700,000,000. Longworth expected $500,000,000.

Steward Shoots Self; Condition Serious

Suffering from bullet wounds of the chest and head, John Marek, 48, of 934 Market street, McKeesport, a steward of the Polish Social Club, today was in a serious condition at the McKeesport Hospital. The wounds were self inflicted yesterday, according to police, who were told Marek was despondent over domestic troubles.

Boat Officers, Crew Freeed in Fatal Fire

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Officers and crew of the excursion boat Eureka II, which burned and sank off Miami last December 14, with the loss of four lives, were exonerated in a report issued by John H. Nolan, federal steamboat inspector. The findings said the fire originated from a spark or short circuit on an auxiliary generator.

M'Cormick Voice to Turn Basso in Space Trip

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Five hundred billion years hence the tenor voice of John McCormack will be just getting back to earth, O. H. Caldwell, of New York City, told the Radio Engineers Club of Chicago last night if Einstein's theory of curved space is correct.

But when the Irish tenor's voice comes booming in, posterity will no doubt toss away history books as fairy tales, because the songs will return in a basso. And Galli-Curci's dulcet soprano will sound like an operatic baritone.

The waves will be intact but slightly weakened by their five hundred billion year journey, He continued:

"Soprano voices will return an octave or more lower. Tenor tones will drop from the high register of the male, but it is extremely likely that the singers will have died before the first broadcast from Pittsburgh in 1920 shall have reached even Betelgeuse on its trip through the heavens."

Coolidge Hopes Morality Will Keep Up to Science

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 14.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

A new social force is being developed by radio waves. The address of the Pope was given wider broadcasting than any other ever delivered, reaching almost all over the world.

Calvin Coolidge

The morning papers carry radio photographs of Marconi in Rome preparing for its transmission. Report comes simultaneously of a successful experiment in television by which people in Leipzig were able to recognize the image of a man in Schenectady. The time may not be far away when it will be possible to have a receiving set in the home that will produce a sound motion picture. Central stations may be able to receive and broadcast to the eye and ear events taking place all over the world.

It is difficult to comprehend what an enormous power this would be. New forces are constantly being created for good or for evil. When primitive people come in contact with civilization usually they use its powers for their own destruction. Unless the moral power of the world increases in proportion to its scientific power there is a real danger that the new inventions will prove instruments of our own destruction. If moral development keeps step, peace and good will have gained new allies.

When Husband John Gilbert, movie Adonis, didn't meet her upon her arrival in Los Angeles, Miss Claire, stage and screen beauty, announced that they've agreed to separate permanently.

FOES OF TOWN HALL SITE TO CONTINUE BATTLE

Claire-Gilbert Experiment Ends in Parting

MOVE HINGES ON LEGAL ADVICE

Opponents Undismayed Over Action of City Council In Approving Ordinance

Organizations opposed to the building of the town hall on the Nicola site in Schenley Farms selected by the County Commissioners, prepared today to continue the battle, undismayed by a second setback late yesterday when City Council by the unanimous vote of the eight members present approved a consent ordinance for the project.

James C. Chaplin, chairman of the Allegheny County Town Hall Association, declared:

"There are two or three things that can be done, and a decision upon our next step must await advice of our counsel."

Council recorded its uuanimous approval of the consent ordinance by action of its finance committee, after a hearing of more than three hours, devoted to spirited protests against the Nicola site, interspersed by applause of a throng of citizens.

The affirmative recommendation of the finance committee on the ordinance is scheduled for final action in Council Monday.

MAGEE OVERRIDDEN

The committee action was taken over the declaration of Attorney William A. Magee, former mayor, who marshaled the protesting speakers, that action by Council on the consent ordinance is illegal because of existing zoning laws.

Members of Council and City Solicitor C. A. Waldschmidt replied to Magee that the ordinance merely gave consent to erection of a town hall and that the question of zoning must come before Council when plans for the structure are submitted. Indications were the fight will be renewed when the question of zoning is raised.

Councilman Harry A. Little, who is in Florida, was the only member missing when the hearing opened, with President John S. Herron presiding. After the hearing the Finance Committee meeting was called, with W. Y. English, chairman, presiding. Robert J. Alderdice offered the motion to affirm the ordinance.

OPPOSES HALL PROJECT

Councilman Charles Anderson then declared:

"It is not our duty to build this building, but we could ask the commissioners to find a better use for the money. None of the town halls in this country has paid, and this would be another white elephant. What's the use of having a building like this which is never used?"

SEPARATION ANNOUNCED BY INA

Stars' Life Apart Failure; Actress Shares Blame, Denies Divorce Is Planned

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 14. — The "perfect experiment" of living apart begun by Ina Claire and John Gilbert more than a year ago has come to an end with a definite separation, the motion picture actress announced today.

After an interview with her actor husband shortly after her arrival here from the East to engage in film work, Miss Claire announced she and Gilbert had agreed to separate.

SHARES RESPONSIBILITY

The actress said, however, that the separation and the difficulties that her marriage to the screen lover encountered were "as much my fault as his." She declared:

"On my arrival here yesterday Mr. Gilbert and I agreed to separate. I did not wish to discuss my personal life at this time, but I felt it only fair and more comfortable for Mr. Gilbert, myself and our friends to stop any further evasion.

"We are both stars and they wouldn't leave us alone. We read continually that we had parted or that there was some difficulty between us. I was not accustomed to the ways of Hollywood and naturally this caused a great deal of disturbance."

NO DIVORCE PLANNED

The actress gave no hint as to any divorce action, saying none was planned.

The couple was married in Las Vegas, Nev., in May, 1929. They had been maintaining separate residences several months, free to visit each other as they chose, a plan which Miss Claire had termed a "perfect experiment."

SLAYER LOSES PLEA FOR LIFE

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—The Arizona Board of Pardons and Paroles denied the application of Charles R. Foster, Claysville, Pa., for commutation of his sentence of death. He was convicted of the murder of Mike Baker, of St. Louis, and is under sentence to hang at the State Prison next Friday.

The board's action removed Foster's last hope for clemency. The State Supreme Court has denied him a hearing of his appeal from conviction.

Baker was shot to death while he slept on the roadside, near Benson, Ariz.

Foster was arrested in Lordsburg, N. M., while living Baker's automobile, a few hours after Baker's body was found in a ditch.

Girl's Faith Upheld As Jury Frees Her

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Lucille Lavelle, 19, looked at the jury and said:

"I just know they'll let me go."

The jury decided Miss Lavelle was not guilty of assault with a deadly weapon. It was charged she set forth with a pistol to shoot a young man, but a cab driver had her arrested for brandishing the weapon at him.

The man she was presumed to have been after with the pistol was Rudolph Cameron, former husband of Anita Stewart, of the cinema.

Ohio Bandits Get $1,000 in Holdup

MARTINS FERRY, O., Feb. 14.—Valentine Day was ushered in with a thousand dollar holdup at the Peter Bournos confectionery at Yorkville by three Negroes who invaded the place soon after it was open. They forced the owner and two customers to put up their hands, took cash estimated at $1,000 and escaped along the Ohio River highway.

DELAY HYMIE'S BID FOR LIBERTY

Habeas corpus proceedings, instituted by "Hymie" Martin, held in connection with the slaying of William E. Potter, have been postponed until Wednesday. Columbus (O.) authorities had arrested Miss Joan Lewis, 26, said to be a friend of Mary Altman, the blonde woman sought as the mysterious "girl friend" of Martin's.

Miss Lewis, police believe, may know the whereabouts of the Altman girl. She admitted, Columbus authorities said, that she attempted to call Miss Altman in Pittsburgh last night, but was unable to locate her.

The habeas corpus proceedings were deferred until Wednesday upon motion of Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt, until the time of the arrival of requisition papers from the Governor. The motion was granted by Judge Joseph Stadtfeld.

Attorney S. S. Rosenberg, Martin's counsel, asked the judge to have Martin transferred to county jail from Central Police Station.

County Votes $15,000 For Helping Hand

A contribution of $15,000 to the work of the Helping Hand Association for 1931 has been voted by County Commissioners. The money will be used in giving food and shelter to needy and unemployed men. The appropriation was made in response to a letter from J. Rogers Flannery and Joseph C. Trees.

Tear Gas Thrown At Movie Showing

BERLIN, Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Tear gas and stench bombs were thrown amidst the audiences at several suburban moving picture houses where the film "The Flute Concert of Sans Souci" was being shown.

Police were called and were forced to use their clubs to disperse the crowds of Communists demonstrating against the picture. Thirty-seven persons were arrested.

MODEL COACH ON VIEW TODAY

The miniature Napoleonic coach from which the members of the Sun-Telegraph chapter of the Fisher Body Craftman's Guild will build examples, was on exhibition this morning at C. A. Rehtmeyer's showroom, Baum and Bigelow boulevards, and this afternoon and evening at Motor Square Garden.

To the winner of the building contest a four-year university scholarship, valued at $5,000, will be awarded, and other prizes totaling $50,000 will be given.

Tomorrow afternoon the coach will be displayed at the Glenshaw Community Presbyterian Church. Monday morning it will be shown in four Wheeling schools and later in the day at the Chamber of Commerce in Washington, Pa.

POOLS USE RACE BET FIGURES

Several city "numbers" pools today began operation on a basis supplied by pari-mutuel racing forms. The "number," roughly, is understood to be chosen from the grand total of sums paid on each horse in all seven races. Only small North Side operators are known to be on the new system, which will, for the present, operate on the Hialeah, Miami, Fla., racing forms.

This system was first proposed here by two Hill District operators, after their return from a conference with New York "numbers" men. The Hill operators rejected the system when, it is said, two former racing touts showed them the "number" could be manufactured by "fixing" the seventh race daily.

Meanwhile, reports of yesterday's play on the books of the two Hill district operators who, with one or two smaller books, are using the dice to set their daily number indicated that public prejudice against the system had been overestimated. It was said that their reputation among gamblers of always paying their losses had instilled confidence in the take-a-chance folk that the dice were "on the level."

Passenger Club Plans Dinner, Dance

The annual dinner and dance of the Pittsburgh Passenger Club will be held in the William Penn Hotel next Friday night. The entertainment will include bridge.

RALLY TO BACK SUNDAY LAWS

A meeting in the Bellefield Presbyterian Church tomorrow night will open a series of mass meetings under auspices of the Sabbath Association of Western Pennsylvania arranged to protest against anti-Sabbath bills now pending in the Pennsylvania Legislature. The Rev. Dr. W. J. Reid will speak at the opening meeting.

Fifteen meetings will be held in widely scattered sections of the Pittsburgh district Sunday afternoon and night, February 22. A midweek meeting wil be held in the North End Methodist Episcopal Church next Thursday night.

Root to Mark 86th Birthday Tomorrow

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—(INS.)—Elihu Root will celebrate his eighty-sixth birthday tomorrow. He will spend the day quietly at home.

ALVIN THEATER HOLDUP FOILED

A man whose attempt last night to hold up the ticket office of the Alvin Theater was frustrated by Percy L. Roberts, the assistant treasurer, was being sought by police and detectives today.

He had waited in the lobby 15 minutes, until the line at the ticket window had cleared, but fled without loot when Roberts, who lives at 913 Crafton boulevard, Crafton, switched off the lights. Roberts told police the would-be robber thrust a revolver through the barred window.

Wayne McGinnis and J. E. Pultz, attendants in a service station of the Standard Oil Company, at Center and South Negley avenues, were held up by two bandits who last night looted the safe of $80. During the robbery, I. O. Schaffer, a watchman at a nearby garage, entered the station, but fled when he saw the bandits. One of the robbers fired a shot at Schaffer as he ran down the driveway.

The P. H. Butler store at 1618 Wood street, Wilkinsburg, was held up by two armed bandits who menaced Ralph Harrison, the manager, and a customer last night. They obtained $49 and escaped in an automobile.

Girl's Leg Fractured In Auto Accident

Miss Sophia Shurska, 19, of 1048 River road, Munhall, suffered a fractured right leg when hit by an automobile on Brown's Hill last night. Curtis Lauderbaugh, of Homestead Park, alleged driver of the machine, took the young woman to the Homestead Hospital and reported the accident to police.

TRAIN SMASHES CAR, MAN LIVES

Although his automobile was carried 40 feet by a Pittsburgh-bound Pennsylvania Railroad freight train at Oakmont, L. H. Frey, 40, of 920 Maryland avenue, Oakmont, was suffering only a scratch of the face today.

Frey's car was struck at the Washington avenue crossing, near the railroad station. The machine was cut in half, police said, and Frey rolled out of his seat to one side of a track.

The automobile and the pilot of the engine were reported demolished from the impact.

EFFORT TO CAP GUSHER FAILS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Victorious in a flood-lighted night battle, a wild oil well, Mary Jane Unsell No. 4, roared into another engagement at daybreak.

Officials of the Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Company, owner of the well, said the gusher probably would be capped today.

Masked workmen, unmindful of the danger of gas and fire, struggled in vain to cap the geyser until late last night. The task was abandoned until a new connection is ready to be stabbed in place. The oil flow was estimated at 600 barrels of oil an hour.

Weather Conditions.

The northwestern high spread eastward, causing a marked drop in temperatures everywhere from the central plains to the Appalachian Mountains. Over the northern plains and westward the temperatures are rising. A high is now centered over Iowa and Missouri, covering most of the interior of the country. The disturbance that caused the rain yesterday is centered off the New England coast. Snow flurries are still in progress over the Upper Ohio Valley states and rain along the Atlantic Coast. Cold weather will continue over this section tonight, but the temperature will rise Sunday and mild weather will prevail again by Monday.

TROOPER PLAN ATTACKED

That Gov. Pinchot's plan for state employed industrial police to replace the coal and iron police force will not lessen the evil but give the state executive's office greater power than under the present law, was the charge of Representative M. A. Musmanno before the Henry George Club yesterday in the Pittsburh Chamber of Commerce.

Musmanno, who backs a bill confining industrial police to duties similar to watchmen and only on the private property, declared if his present measure is not passed he will be prepared to place a repeal bill into the House to abolish the acts of 1865 and 1866 that established the system. Pinchot's plan, he said, would mean corporations would not be liable in damage suits while the state is immune from such responsibility.

VOTE DEVICE BID DATA GIVEN

The Chicago firm developing a new type of voting machine recommended by Edgar J. Kaufmann will be given an opportunity to bid on the 1,100 voting machines to be delivered to Allegheny County by August 15.

County Commissioners acted favorably on a telegraphed request from Edward Rogal, president of Central Records, Inc., asking for the new voting machine specifications and the time limit. These were ordered forwarded at once.

Rogal had previously appeared with Kaufmann before commissioners to ask an extension of time in order to complete definite plans for the new type of machine which is said to embody a principle similar to that used in the dial telephone. Commissioners refused the delay on the ground that the state act has set a time limit which must be obeyed.

Adjt. Maude Hazelwood, of New York, territorial Girl Guard organizer of the Salvation Army, will speak at all services tomorrow in the Army headquarters, 425 Second avenue.

Adjt. Hazelwood opened conferences with Army officers and leaders here today and will conduct a demonstration of Girl Guard activities in the auditorium tonight. Troops of Guards from the various Allegheny County branches will take part.

The services tomorrow will be in charge of Adjt. George Brooks. "Jesus Looks at Death" will be the subject of the Sunday school lesson at 2 p. m.

Real Estate

A modern brick home in Virginia avenue, Mt. Lebanon, has been purchased by Daniel R. Blower from William E. Harley. The lot measures 40x120 feet. In Royce avenue, near Cochran road, a brick house and garage on lot 44x122 feet has been sold by the Citizens State Bank to L. W. Long.

Frederick Fullenwarth has sold to William C. Dinsmore an improved property on lot measuring 25x105 feet at Harrison and Orchard avenues, Avalon. The consideration was private.

Robert W. Semenow, director of the Real Estate License Bureau of Pennsylvania, will speak at the regular dinner meeting of the McKeesport Real Estate Board next Thursday evening in the Penn-McKee Hotel. Semenow's subject will be "The Real Estate License Law." He will discuss the law's workings in 1930 and outline plans for the future. Carl F. Morlock, president of the McKeesport board, has invited members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board to attend the affair.

Two building lots, each measuring 60x193 feet, in Ordale boulevard, Mt. Lebanon, have been purchased by J. T. Schneider from C. I. Shannon for $6,000.

A five-room frame dwelling on lot 36½x120 feet in McCully avenue, Versailles Township, has been conveyed by Cecil Robinson, builder, to William Hayes, for $5,500.

The Fidelity Trust Company has deeded to William E. Carey a lot 40x150 feet in New Brighton road, Ross Township, for a consideration of $2,000.

Applications for building permits follow:

Fourteenth Ward—B. F. Harris, brick addition, 1117 South Negley avenue, $7,000.

Peter Miller, brick dwelling, 1812 Westmont avenue, $6,500.

Fifteenth Ward—E. E. Stiner, brick dwelling, 837 Greenfield avenue, $4,000.

Ninth Ward—J. D. Puleo, brick store, 4306 Butler street, $5,500.

Eleventh Ward—C. J. Goodwin, brick dwelling and garage, 1112 Farragut street, $9,000.

Evangelist

MRS. GERALD E. BONNEY

CHURCH TO HOLD CAMPAIGN

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. Bonney, evangelists, will open a series of services Wednesday night in the Friendship Park Methodist Episcopal Church, Liberty avenue and Mathilda street.

The meetings will continue through March 8. Mrs. Bonney will speak at the services and her husband will have charge of the musical programs.

Tomorrow morning, in preparation for the campaign, the Rev. W. E. Boetticher, pastor of the church, will deliver addresses adapted to the occasion.

St. Luke Brotherhood Will Hold Banquet

The tenth annual banquet of the Brotherhood of St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church, West View, will be held Monday night in the church auditorium, Center and Ridgewood avenues. Edward A. Young will be toastmaster, and Judge William H. McNaugher will be the speaker.

Bible School Dean To Speak Tomorrow

The Rev. Charles Embrey, dean of the Western Pennsylvania Bible School, 308 Cedar avenue, North Side, will have charge of the Bible hour in the school tomorrow afternoon. At the 7:45 p. m. service the Rev. C. J. Franklin, Canadian evangelist, will conduct an evangelistic service.

NEW STATIONS OF CROSS TO BE BLESSED

Ceremony Will Be Held In Mother of Sorrows Edifice in Morning

The solemn blessing of the new Stations of the Cross of Mother of Sorrows Church, Stowe Township, will be held tomorrow morning, before the 11 o'clock mass. The bishop has delegated the Rev. Carmine Cillo, pastor, for the ceremony. The new stations are of Gothic design, to conform with the high altar and the entire construction of the church. Each of the stations is illuminated.

The stations were designed by Philip Oriolo, architect, and member of the parish, and Joseph Diloro was the artist. They were assisted in the construction by Tony Mazzarini. The work required two months in the preparation of the mold.

CHURCH CLOSED PENDING RULING

Judge Elder W. Marshall, of Common Pleas Court, has decreed that no services shall be held in the First Slavish Roman Catholic Greet Rite Church, Clairton, and that consideration of appointment of a receiver for the church corporation, which owns $150,000 of property, shall be delayed pending outcome of an appeal on a former issue in the church controversy, now before the State Supreme Court.

One phase of the dispute, which began four years ago, was an order by Judge Marshall that the trustees permit a pastor, named by the bishop, to conduct services. The trustees appealed this decision to the Supreme Court.

When the pastor tried to take charge, in January, the trustees kept the edifice locked. The opposing faction asked the court for an injunction against the trustees and followed this with a petition asking that a receiver be appointed. When the injunction case came before Judge Marshall he made the order that it and the receivership case remain in statu quo. The Supreme Court will hear the appeal next month.

Illustrated Talk Planned in Church

The Rev. Dr. William T. Lytle, of the Ben Avon United Presbyterian Church, will speak tomorrow morning on "What Shall I Do to Inherit Eternal Life?" At the evening service an illustrated talk on India and Japan will be presented.

RIFT WITH SECOND MATE LED ALMA RUBENS TO DOPE

JOY OF LIVING KILLED BY DRUG

Love Missing, There Was No Marital Happiness; Goes Back to Hollywood

By ALMA RUBENS.

CHAPTER XIV.

We had just completed the picture for Pathe, when I received an urgent message to visit the office of Zit—C. F. Zittel, publisher of Zit's Weekly—at once. I did so, and within half an hour we had agreed on a contract under which I was to receive $1,000 a week for the first year, with an option at $1,500 for the second. He was acting in behalf of Cosmopolitan Pictures.

Then, as usual, the god of chance threw a monkey wrench into the wheels of my life.

As I was about to affix my signature to this most formidable pact, Zit casually asked: "I suppose you are of age?

I dropped the pen, but my heart beat it to the floor. I tried to say "yes," but my tongue said "no."

My feet wouldn't move. They were stuck to the floor. My mouth was open and I hadn't the power to close it. I just stood there, mute, broken-hearted, utterly incapable of coping with my feelings.

Miss Rubens

Zit led me to a divan and tried to console me. "Never mind, Alma," he said. "All you'll have to do is bring your mother here. She can sign the papers and everything will be all right."

He didn't know that my mother was in California—3,000 miles away. And he wasn't aware that neither of us had enough money for her to make the trip. I was at sea, but finally managed to explain the situation.

Zit reached for the telephone and asked me where to call her. I told him, and when she answered at the other end of the wire, he handed the instrument to me.

"Mom, mom," was all I could say. "Momma, dear, you've got to hurry. I'm to get a thousand a week. Hurry here to sign the contract."

I don't remember what else was said, but whatever it was, everything was arranged and she was to leave at once.

I went back to my room at the Commodore, but I don't believe I slept a wink during the four days and five night before my mother got to New York. When she arrived, I couldn't wait until she got to Zit's office. The poor woman was hustled off before she even had a chance to comb her hair. And when the contract was signed, I led her back to the hotel, so excited, so happy, that I fell asleep in a chair.

Idle Six Months

Then began the long wait for a role. I didn't do a bit of work, except collect my salary, for the first six months I was with Cosmopolitan.

My first picture was "Humoresque," in which I was the star, supported by Gaston Glass. Never shall I forget the thrill when I first saw my name in huge electrics on Broadway; recalling to my memory the prophecy I had made to my dear, sick father on the day of my confirmation and loss of my first handsome scar-faced fireman lover.

Dr Goodman, meantime, still showered attentions on me and begged me to marry him. I wouldn't consent. I frankly told him I didn't love him. I admired him greatly, and would have cut off my right hand rather than hurt him, but I just couldn't think of marrying him.

My mother, too, adored him and added her arguments to his, but I was adamant.

So things went along until, in my second year with Cosmopolitan, I was notified without previous warning one afternoon that I, with the rest of the cast, was to sail for Europe at the end of that week.

When my mother came in we both became so excited we broke out in a nervous rash. Our arms and chests were covered with little red pimples that didn't disappear for days.

The picture was called "Enemies of Women," and most of the scenes were in Paris.

When we had completed this, mother and I made a tour that took us to Berlin, Vienna, Rome, Venice, Madrid and most of the principal cities of which we had heard so much, but which, up until I received my sailing orders, we had never hoped to be able to visit.

Upon our return Dr Goodman persuaded me to marry him. I did it simply because I didn't have the heart to refuse him. He had always been so kind so good to me and to mother, and so seemingly sincere, that I did it just to keep from hurting him. He was aware of this, but said I would learn to love him after we were married.

The ceremony took place in Greenwich, Conn., and we rented an apartment on West Fifty-ninth street, overlooking Central Park. My mother took an apartment of her own at the San Remo Hotel.

As might have been expected in the circumstances, we were unhappy from the beginning. Where love is missing on one side there can be no real marital happiness.

We quarreled. And, occasionally, when my husband felt repulsed he would accuse me of being in love with someone else. Such, of course, was absolutely without foundation. Things continued this way month after month, and then, suddenly, I learned that my husband was having me trailed. He had private detectives seeking to learn of times with the "other" man who did not exist.

Alma Furious

When I first learned this, I was furious. Then the humor of the situation struck me and I had a good laugh. I told my husband I knew about it and warned him that if he didn't desist, I would leave him at once. He promised to do so.

Then came an illness, painful and nerve-wracking, though of short duration, but which proved to be the ultimate stumbling block upon which my career was wrecked.

It marked the beginning of my addiction to the use of narcotic drugs.

It would take a book of a hundred volumes to tell half the story of my life, after I took my first dose of dope.

Before that hour and that minute I had my joys and sorrows, my hopes and fears, but most of the time my heart was light and I went dancing through life on my tip toes.

I was young and I was making something like success in my chosen profession.

I had friends, money, a devoted husband, youth, and the world before me.

From the instant I learned the subtle slavery of morphine my life became a hopeless tragedy.

It took just one dose of morphine given to me by one of the finest and most highly respected physicians in America to put me into the chains of the most hideous slavery ever endured by any human being.

It all happened like this:

I was working hard making a picture in the New York studios and I was taken ill with cruel, tearing pains that made me utterly unable to do my work.

My mother called the best specialist in New York to attend me.

I believed that doctor to be a good, honest, conscientious and able man, but I wish I had dropped dead at my work before I let my mother send for him to attend me.

He did everything he could to relieve my pain—the picture was waiting, the scenery was on the set, the other actors were wondering where I was—I could not lift my head from the pillow.

I begged the doctor to give me something that would make me able to do my work if only for a few hours.

He looked at me sharply, hesitated, took out his tablet and wrote a prescription.

"Give her one of these," he said to my mother, "and see how it acts."

My mother gave me the little white pill. I swallowed it and before it was fairly down my throat I began to feel a sense of dreamy peace and rest.

In five minutes the agony of my pain was gone, and sudden life surged in my veins.

I got up out of bed, put on my clothes and went down to the studio to do my work.

I thought it was all wonderful.

I wish now that well-meaning and kindly doctor had given me a dose of cyanide and put me out of my misery once and for all then and there.

Shortly after that I was called to Hollywood to make a new picture.

My mother went to see the doctor, and he gave her a tube of the little white pellets.

"When that pain comes on," he said, "give your daughter a tablet, be careful and don't give her another for two hours; I wish I thought I could operate and save her these periodical attacks, but I don't think there is a thing I can do. She is very young now; when she is older she will doubtless be all right."

And my mother took me to Hollywood with the hideous snake of morphine curled up in her pocket in the shape of a tube of innocent looking white pellets.

I didn't think about the pellets again till the old attacks of pain began. When that happened my mother opened her bag and handed me a white pellet, just exactly like one of the most skillful gynecologists in New York, and indeed in America, had told her to do.

My own mother and I knew then and know now, that she would rather have died at the stake than to harm one hair of my head.

The pellet down, the pain gone, the sweet lassitude of five minutes of the terrific rushing stream of energy all at once, as if someone had given me a shot from an electric battery—it was the old story all over again.

A nice pleasant, comfortable story, with a strange, wild exhilaration about it.

But, after my second dose, when I had exhausted the wild exuberance it gave me, there came a dreadful sense of sinking, a feeling of something like a swoon.

My ears rang, the tears poured down my cheeks; I began to tremble, and I really thought I was going to die.

19 Per Cent Jobless In Westmoreland

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 14.—Nineteen per cent, or 14,694 out of 73,577, the number of men normally employed in Westmoreland County, are now without jobs, the Westmoreland County unemployment committee will tell Gov. Gifford Pinchot's unemployment committee. The survey has just been completed.

CAFE NAMED IN BANKRUPT BILL

An involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed in Federal Court against the Fifth Avenue Restaurant Corporation, sometime trading under the name of Plaza Restaurant, Plaza Building, Fifth avenue. The three petitioners listed claims aggregating $19,298.26.

The largest was for $19,249.51 by Frank Campbell, which was described as a claim assigned by E. S. Bromeier for money lent by Bromeier from November, 1930, to February, 1931, inclusive. A. R. Geyer, trading as the Geyer Printing Company, listed a claim for $21.75 and Clinton A. Andres, trading as the Homewood Printing Company, listed a claim for $21.

'Jinx' Day Recalls Son's Fate, Man Ends Life

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—On Friday, the thirteenth of July, 1928, William T. Gower received word that his son, Sam, had died in the electric chair at the state prison farm, for a robbery and killing.

Yesterday it was again Friday, the thirteenth. All day Gower's daughter watched her father closely. When he left the house, she went in search for him.

She reached the porch, heard a shot. In a vacant house, across the road, she found her father's body, a shotgun and a note giving directions for his funeral lying beside him.

3 PAROLED, ONE FINED FOR RUM

Three Homestead residents entered pleas of no defense in Criminal Court late yesterday to charges of possessing liquor in a place in Cherry way, Homestead.

Edward Lefsky, 22, of 518 East Fourth avenue, Homestead, was fined $100 and paroled for 15 months. He admitted he had been employed in the place, but told the court the other defeendants, his brother, Samuel, 23, and Samuel Feldman, 19, of 328 East Third avenue, Homestead, were merely visiting him when the arrests were made. The two were released on one-year paroles.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Horse Show To Be Held June 4-6

With February only half over, it may seem a little too early to become excited over events in June, but the speed with which time is passing this winter and the pleasures of anticipating an event are, on second thought, sufficient excuse.

And all this preamble is leading up to the news that the annual Allegheny Country Club horse show will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 4, 5 and 6, in the show ring, Sewickley Heights.

Many folks are already having their mounts exercised, and when folks return in the spring from the South, everyone will be preparing for the big event of early June.

Yesterday at a wedding in Montclair, N. J., Joseph W. Oliver, Jr., of Pittsburgh, and Henry Oliver, Jr., and Thomas A. Staneich, Jr., of Sewickley, were ushers. The bride was Constance Leake, daughter of the Eugene W. Leakes, of Montclair, and she married John DeForest Buckingham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Buckingham, of Watertown, Conn. The ceremony took place in St. Luke's Church at 4:30 o'clock, and the reception followed in the Montclair Country Club.

Unusual Gowns

For the ceremony the bride wore a gown of white [illegible] fitting sleeves and a court train draped from the waistline. A cap of rose point finished her tulle veil and she carried a sheaf of calalilies.

The attendants wore similar gowns of black velvet with bolero jackets banded with white fox, and small velvet hats. Katherine Beach of Montclair was the maid of honor, and the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. William Gross, of Watertown, was the matron of honor. The bridesmaids included Nancy Buckingham, sister of the bridegroom; Lesta Morse, Elizabeth Hanna, of Montclair, and Mrs. Charles F. Smithers. They carried arm bouquets of American Beauty roses. Lindy Low, of Watertown, small cousin of the bridegroom, was the flower girl.

Serving as best man was Thatcher M. Brown, Jr., of New York. In addition to the three Pittsburghers, the ushers included Eugene W. Leake, Jr., and John B. Leake, brothers of the bride; John M. Lindeke, of Minneapolis, Minn.; William Mosle, of New York; Woodruff Tappin, of Scarsdale, N. Y.; Nelson Cherry, of Fall River, Mass.; Ford H. Jones, of Cincinnati; Denison Kitchell and J. Kent Willing, Jr., of Philadelphia.

The bride attended Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., and is a member of the Junior League. Mr. Buckingham is a graduate of the Taft School, a member of the senior class at Yale, and a member of Chi Psi and the Wolf's Head Society.

The Buckinghams will go to Nassau for their honeymoon and live in Watertown later.

Club Congress Women Vote 124 to 1 for Downtown Town Hall Site

All but one of the 125 women at the presidents' luncheon given yesterday by the Congress of Clubs expressed themselves as favoring a downtown site for the Town Hall. Word of this was taken by Mrs. C. E. Coslowsky and Miss Helen Grimes, both past presidents of the Congress, to the City Council meeting later in the afternoon.

Mrs. Coslowsky spoke at the luncheon concerning the site of the hall, and Miss Grimes made a stirring plea that the women write their senators urging them to vote for adherence to the World Court.

A most unusual program was provided by Mrs. J. Charles Wilson. She introduced A. J. Ackerman, hydraulic engineer, who told of and showed motion pictures of "The World's Greatest Splash," the tipping of the Chute A Caron obelisk into the Saguenay River, Canada.

The exclusive pictures of this tremendous and difficult piece of engineering could not fail to impress even a roomfull of women, who were totally ignorant of engineering and its principles, especially when the films were so comprehensively explained.

They showed the building of the huge 40-foot wide, 92-foot high, 23,000,000-pound concrete obelisk and its release and fall into place, an inch within calculations. These were no less than thrilling, but especially so was a slow-motion picture, 48 times as slow as the actual motion, and said to be one of the most remarkable slow motion pictures ever taken.

By means of charts the why and wherefore of the obelisk were made plain—the diverting of the river from its natural channel in order to create power for the company which Mr. Ackerman represents.

The afternoon's entertainment also included music. Elsie Breese Mitchell, chairman of music, sang with her usual graciousness and artistry. Mrs. H. D. Everett accompanying, and Miss Julia Bramson, a newcomer to the Congress, won instant approbation for her mastery of the piano in several solos.

The decorations were in red, white and blue.

Voters' Meetings

Mrs. R. P. Keenoy, chairman of the Tenth and Eleventh Ward League of Women Voters, will be hostess to that unit on Monday afternoon at her home in Jancey street. "Employment Insurance" will be debated by the Pitt Girls' Debating team, after which Mrs. Kenneth Gould, executive secretary of the County League, will speak.

Mrs. John O. Miller will conduct an open forum on legislative happenings on Tuesday afternoon in the league headquarters, Peoples Bank Building.

The Forest Hills League will hold its monthly meeting on Friday afternoon in the Municipal Building. Mrs. Gould will again speak, this time on the election laws reform code.

The Pitt girls' team will debate on "Employment Insurance" before the Twenty-third Ward League on Friday evening in the Latimer Junior High School. A benefit card party will be held next Saturday afternoon in the Oppenheim-Collins auditorium for the benefit of the Twenty-third Ward unit.

There will be no Friday Morning Club meeting next week, but on Friday, February 27, Mrs. Ida Wright Bowman will give her second talk of the season in Carnegie Music Hall.

FLANNEL DECREED FAVORITE FABRIC FOR SPRING WEAR

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—This spring should find many of us in flannels, well flannel coats and suits at any rate. Flannel has gone big as a resort fabric and so it is only to be expected that it would be made up into nice looking runabout clothes for spring wear in town. A flannel coat will be found to be just what is wanted for traveling, as it is light and has the requisite warmth. Then, too, it tailors well and neatly. No doubt later in the year we shall have flannel coats cut on the loose, comfortable lines, which is quite in the accepted order of things sartorial. We do not know if flannel looms as important in your shops and houses as it does here, but the very fact that it is being sponsored by couturiers here who have an important American following should insure its success. But beware of inexpensive flannel garments if you want to keep on friendly terms with that material.

* * *

ONE OF THE smartest utility coats we have seen for some time has just been shown by Chanel. We hasten to send you a sketch of it, as we think that you will find it interesting. Its smart, semi-fitted and double breasted lines are most attractive and decidedly youthful. The material is gray flannel, which should give you an adequate idea of how very smart a flannel coat can and should be. The tailored fur collar with wide revers and the deep, flaring cuffs are of gray astrakan.

Relatives Plan to Go Away And Larry Asks Mary Lou to Marry Him

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful orphan girl of the "home" type, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher and the latter an engineer. Mary Lou looks after Billy, their small son. Larry Mitchell, young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Mary Lou is happy, but vitally restless. Larry appears on the scene, rescues Billy from peril in traffic, makes a date with Mary Lou for the next day and dashes off in his pursuit of news.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER II.

Oh, to be Larry . . . free to come and go and to see adventure first hand! When he told her, as he sometimes did, of his daily round—never dull to Larry, now that he had graduated from reporting unimportant political dinners and ward picnics—Mary Lou, listening to those sagas, would grow wide-eyed and breathless, living it over, every step of the way—

"So this cop steps up, see, and pulls out his gun and says—"

Here, Mary Lou would shiver and close her eyes and then open them, bravely facing that gleaming message of death, hearing mentally, and, perhaps, prematurely, the sharp, pregnant report.

Oh, to be the actress she had seen last week! The poet whose book had just thrilled her! The new champion of the tennis courts!

But she had a saving grace, her sense of humor. As she couldn't act—well, perhaps she could, a little; she'd appeared in church society plays now and then and had performed with poise and delight. But she couldn't act well enough to be anything but a pretty amateur. And while she wove all sorts of delightful stories in her mind, she couldn't put them down on paper. She hadn't even inherited her father's little gift for line and color. She had no marketable talent. And she knew it.

Mary Lou Is Worried

She was to know it even more convincingly a week or so later when Howard Sanderson came home one night with the amazing news that he had had an offer to go to the Orient on construction engineering work; and, what was more amazing, to take Mrs. Sanderson with him, in the capacity of secretary to the expedition.

Far lands and alien places and a chance to do a good job and to travel! They'd always wanted to travel, especially Clara, who had often envied Howard's light-hearted sister and her husband. But now, there was Billy to think of and also Mary Lou, for whom they were responsible.

Sanderson had three weeks to make up his mind. And for two weeks, every evening, Saturday afternoons and Sundays, the family went into a sort of huddle—perhaps we had better call it a conference—and discussed the matter, pro and con.

Larry was present, often, putting in his shrewd oar now and then. He fully sympathized with the Sandersons' anxiety to accept the offer, to get away, out of the rut, to see things for themselves. But Mary Lou worried him; she tried so hard to be fair, tried so hard not to be bewildered, tried so hard to forget herself; yet she was a bit white-lipped these days, there were shadows under the blue eyes, dark as bruises on the white skin. And in her eyes, although she tried to hide it, he read the unconscious appeal—"What is to become of me?"

Had No Training

For she wasn't trained. Not as a clerk, a bookkeeper, a nurse, a teacher, a stenographer or a secretary. And she had always been so sheltered; in her years of wandering, by her father's and mother's love and vigilant protection, and since then, by the friendly roof of the little house, by the affection of her relatives.

But—

"You must go!" decided Mary Lou, firmly, when the time was almost up.

"But you—?"

"Never mind me—" said Mary Lou.

"Billy," said Billy's mother on a long breath, broken off like a sob, "Billy's pretty little to leave behind and we can't take him. I mean, children get sick so quickly—they—they—"

"Don't say it!" cried Mary Lou, rather unnecessarily, for indeed Clara couldn't finish. "Billy's the healthiest child in the world! Gram says she'll take him. You haven't a thing to worry about. It's your big chance. You must go," she repeated, firmly.

There was a little silence. Larry Mitchell looked across at Mary Lou and at her gallantly shining eyes. But he thought he saw uncertainty, fear, even, in their blue depths, as if a child still cried out, lonely and frightened—"what will become of me!"

No Place for Mary

In that moment Larry's sacrificial gesture of the generous heart was born.

"I know," Clara said after a moment, "that Gram will take Billy—she and Adelaide can look after him all right—but—there's you, to be considered, dear—"

"I'll be all right," said Mary Lou bravely. "I could stay with Gram for a little while, until I get a job."

"Gram" was Clara Sanderson's mother, Mrs. Jennings, a dear old lady, almost old enough to be her daughter's grandmother. She lived out on Long Island in a quaint, little old-fashioned house, and with her lived her only other surviving child, Adelaide, who had given up school teaching for a happy invalidism. Adelaide was over 50 and enjoyed poor health.

There would be room for Billy with Gram and Aunt Adelaide; cookie jars and creamy milk; a garden to play in; two devoted slaves to bind up wounded knees and tell stories and listen to prayers. There was a school nearby. Oh, Billy would be taken care of!

But there was no room for Mary Lou, that is, not for long, and Gram's income was very limited indeed. The Sandersons could pay for Billy's certified milk, board and lodging, but they couldn't afford to pay for Mary Lou's—and Mary Lou needed lots of air and space and she had a healthy appetite.

Larry Proposes

Presently, the meeting adjourned. Out on the front porch Mary Lou sat with Larry, while the Sandersons, in the living room, went over the details of their trip—the advantages, the disadvantages, the fears and hopes and worries. Howard pacing the floor, smoking furiously and Clara sitting on the couch, a wet handkerchief in one hand but a sparkle in her eyes. If she could only persuade herself that Billy would be all right and Mary Lou settled she would be the happiest woman in the world, she thought, and the most excited.

"Job?" said Mary Lou to Larry in a small voice. "I suppose I can learn something! But business school takes time and money, I guess," she added on a stifled giggle, "I'll end up as mother's helper or a saleslady. Charge it, Modom?" asked Mary Lou in an affected tone of voice.

"Look here, Mary Lou, marry me—I haven't much but we can get along, somehow," said Larry abruptly, and his own voice sounded strange to him. "I don't want you behind a counter or gallivanting around by yourself. You—you are a dear little idiot and you'd get into all sorts of jams. You marry me, Mary Lou, and I'll take care of you!" he ended, sternly.

Objects to Marriage

Mary Lou stared at him speechless. Then the bright tears welled to her eyes and fell . . . round drops sliding down her flushing cheek.

"Am I so—distasteful to you," he asked, in dismay.

"No—no—you're the best friend I have on earth," choked Mary Lou, "and—and— Oh, Larry, what a lamb you are! Asking me to marry you when—when you're so ambitious, so anxious to get ahead . . . asking me to come and be a burden, a regular old millstone. You don't want me, really, Larry, you don't love me, dear—"

"But . . ." began Larry, helplessly.

"No, you don't! Not . . . not the marrying way. And I don't love you—that way. Every other way, yes. But not . . . not that, Larry, you know I won't marry you—but—I do thank you for asking me," said Mary Lou with a quaint sort of ceremony.

He took her cold little hands in his own and leaned close to the fragrant, rounded cheek, the crop of curling red-gold hair.

"I want to take care of you!" he said stubbornly.

Chivalry isn't dead, after all. Mary Lou shook her head.

"I'll have to take care of myself," she cried out, "and it's high time I learned how. Get me a job, Larry, any kind of a job and I'll be so grateful to you. And now, for mercy's sake, go home."

She turned a little and brushed a very small kiss across his lean, freckled cheek, and got to her feet.

"Golly," said Mary Lou, simply, "but you're a good friend."

MARC CONNELLY TO OPEN DRAMA SERIES ON RADIO

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Marc Connelly, former Pittsburgh newspaperman, whose play, "The Green Pastures" is the outstanding hit on Broadway, speaks over the Red network tonight in the first of a series of Drama League programs. Members of the cast are to sing Negro spirituals. WTAM is the station at 11:30. Connelly started playwriting when a reporter on the Pittsburgh Gazette Times. His first production, "The Lady of Luzon" was presented in a downtown theater. Zoel Parenteau, musical director of KDKA, cooperated with Connelly by composing the music. Connelly then went to New York, tied up with George Kaufman and produced three successful plays, "Dulcy," "Beggars on Horseback" and Merton of the Movies."

William J. Lewis, theatrical critic; James J. Long, sport expert; Chilly Doyle, baseball writer; Frank Bingamin and Uriah Allen, photographers—all of the Sun-Telegraph — were closely associated with Connelly when he wrote newspaper yarns.

It is Valentine Day and boys of the Red Arrow Quartet are to serenade the Eskimos with a party on KDKA at 11:20. The long winter night in the Arctic Circle ends on Tuesday, February 17, so the Golden Arrow Orchestra concludes the program very appropriately with "Here Comes the Sun."

* * *

Fliers at a dozen scattered outposts of the Canadian forest service and in outlying air mail bases are to receive greetings from officials of the Aero Club of Pittsburgh, KDKA at midnight. It is part of the ceremony attending arrangements for the Aero Club's ninth annual ball in the William Penn next Friday.

WCAE brings us a new series from WLW at 11 . . . Snoop and Peep cut musical capers on WCAE at 7:30 . . . Weber and Fields give a delicatessen scene, WCAE at 8. . . . "Kathleen Mavourneen" is the Show Boat production on WJAS at 10 in competition with "Cuckoo" on KDKA . . . "Aunt Lulu," a good feature, returns to KDKA at 10:45.

QUESTION A DAY:

Do you have the home addresses of radio stars? I have letters for Maurice Chevalier, Raymond Knight, Little Jack Little and Ben Bernie. I want them to be read personally.—A. C. C., Irwin, Pa.

Answer—We are reluctant to print home addresses. In the future please inclose a self-addressed envelope for reply. Send Chevalier's letter to Grace Towne, NBC Artists' Service, 711 Fifth avenue, New York; Raymond Knight, Hotel Des Artistes, 1 West Sixty-seventh street, New York; Jack Little, St. Moritz Hotel, 60 Central Park South, New York; Ben Bernie, care of Pat Flanagan, Station WBBM, Chicago.

An authentic Indian ritual is to be radioed from Niagara Falls, N. Y., by WABC at 9 o'clock tonight. The occasion is the initiation of Francis D. Bowman, reader of Indian legends, into the Deer Clan of the Tuscaroras. Ancient ceremonial songs are to be sung to the accompaniment of tom-toms and rattles.

To give the judges a better opportunity for studying the speech of radio announcers in the spring and summer, award of the diction medal for radio announcers has been postponed by Hamlin Garland until the annual meeting of the Academy of Arts in November.

Television broadcasts from Schenectady have been received successfully in London, Berlin and Leipsiz, say WGY engineers.

* * *

"Is that program from New York?" asked "Chilly" Doyle last night during the WCAE Trio recital. A well put question, for this string group is really top notch. And Fred Webber fits into the picture like Milton Cross.

* * *

We would like to hear more of them.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Of all the spectacular achievements of radio none has seized the popular imagination, has captured the columns of the public prints as has the broadcast of the Pope.

Even the widely heralded march to the microphone of King George in that chilling January dawn a year ago fades into insignificance when compared to radio's release of "the prisoner of the Vatican."

* * *

The rendezvous with the King put radio conspicuously on the front page. It was as novel as it was startling—in an age when the startling is so quickly the commonplace. But it lacked the sensational spectacularness of the audience with the Pope. Something had to come to pass that not even the pathfinders of the air had considered a year ago remotely possible. It has been called a miracle of the microphone.

* * *

More than a year ago, attempts were made by American broadcasters to bring by radio an Easter message from the Pope. They were not received with favor by the cardinals, archbishops and other high prelates of the American church. The radio men refused to be discouraged.

They were heartened when Marconi began the construction of a wireless station at the Vatican. They had formed close friendships with Marconi, they were aware of the wireless wizard's appreciation of the program and ingenuity of American broadcasting. They depended to a large extent upon his influence at Rome.

* * *

And at last word came that the Pope had consented to broadcast a message to the world, but only after he was assured, it is said, that all radio facilities would be available to him. He had been informed, it is said, that many thousands of the faithful would be deprived of the opportunity of hearing him unless all broadcasting facilities were open to him.

* * *

Today the Pope's broadcast—the most impressive of all broadcasts—is history, and the radio men can point to a new and brilliant achievement. With patriotic pride they can point to it as a distinctly American achievement.

It was American radio men who conceived the idea, just as it has been American radio men who have planned and carried to success all of the notable and stirring international broadcasts of the past year. It is the triumph of these international programs that has made America the radio leader of the world.

STABILIZATION LAW SIGNING SIGNIFICANT

Suffering Could Have Been Reduced If Act Had Been On Statute Books Sooner

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Perhaps, from a long term standpoint, the signing by the President of the Wagner business stabilization law is more significant than the flurry in the stock market.

Spurts in stock prices have little meaning for the propertyless man who is still without employment.

Mr. Rukeyser

The intensity of the depression has at least jolted Congress out of its smugness, and awakened it to the need of following Senator Wagner's social minded leadership in the direction of scientific planning to stabilize the business cycle. Heretofore, public men have considered stabilizing measures only during hard times, and have forgotten about them as soon as business recovered.

NEEDED SOONER

The human suffering in connection with the present economic readjustmet, which happily gives evidence of having reached its last phase, could have been reduced if the country had adopted some of the constructive suggestions made in 1921 by the President's committee on unemployment, of which Herbert Hoover, then Secretary of Commerce, was the directing head. But before the recommendations were formulated, business recovery had gotten under way, and unemployment and business stabilization ceased any longer to interest the public and the politicians.

As President Hoover pointed out in signing the bill, which provides for long term planning of public works:

"The principles of this act were suggested to Congress at various times during the past five years, but it was not until we experienced this depression that their usefulness was recognized."

URGES STATE LAWS

Senator Wagner, who had the imagination to sense the need long before the "new era" boom was over, now wisely directs the attention of state and municipal governments to the need of similar legislation. The New York lawmaker pointed out:

"Similar legislation is a fundamental necessity in every state and municipal government. The intelligent administration of this act and of similar acts in the several states will contribute mightily to the stabilization of business and the steadiness of employment."

The Wagner act sets up machinery for long-term planning of public works so that the blue prints will be ready as soon as an emergency looms. The law, which is intended primarily for the relief of the public in future depressions, sets up the Federal Employment Stabilization Board, which will attempt to speed up public works when private business is slack. The board is to watch the volume of private and public construction, the index of employment and other statistical indicators showing the impending rise or fall of prosperity.

MILK BOTTLE LOSS LARGE

Very few people have any idea of the enormous loss the dairy companies suffer in the failure of consumers to return milk bottles, according to Peter P. Carney, director of sales of the Liberty Dairy Products Company. Mr. Carney is also secretary of the Greater Pittsburgh Milk Dealers' Association.

Quart glass bottles cost the dealer nearly 6 cents each, yet the loss of the Pittsburgh dairies is upwards of 2,000,000 bottles a month. The efficient work of the Allegheny County Bottle Exchange in rounding up stray bottles, searching the highways and byways for bottles that people toss away, and returning them to their rightful owners, aids the dairies in reducing the loss.

The Allegheny County Bottle Exchange in 1930 salvaged more than 15,000,000 bottles, innumerable cases and cans. It has been in operation nine years and in that time it has salvaged 105,000,000 bottles and 250,000 cases and cans.

If all those who used milk and cream would set the bottles on the porch or in a place where the driver could collect them the dairy companies of Pittsburgh would welcome the co-operation, and this co-operation, too, would be relished by the bottle exchange, which is supported by all the dairies of the city and vicinity. When the bottle exchange gathers up an average of 43,333 empty milk bottles each day of the year, it is time that someone called the attention of the housewives to the necessity of returning empty milk bottles.

AIR BRAKE TO REPORT $2.05

After the meeting of the board of directors of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company yesterday it was reported that earnings for the year ending December 31, 1930, were $6,496,841, equivalent to $2.05 per share, as compared with $8,822,711, equivalent to $2.78 per share in the year 1929. The company's annual report, with consolidated balance sheet will be ready for distribution early in March.

The regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share was declared, payable April 30 to stock of record March 31.

LIQUOR KILLS MAN, 2 HELD

The death of a man believed to be Samuel A. Hall, 50, in a restaurant at 6358 Frankstown avenue, resulted last night in a raid on the place and arrest of two men on a charge of keeping a disorderly house.

The two men, W. C. Clay, and Harry Gainer, were arrested, police reported, after the confiscation of a small quantity of moonshine. A autopsy disclosed Hall, whose address was not learned, died from acute alcoholism.

Fined $125 for Rum And Slot Machine

Judge George V. Moore late yesterday fined Ray F. Maloney, 29, of Heisel street, Homestead, $125 for possessing liquor and a slot machine, and released him on probation for 15 months, following Maloney's plea of guilty.

OBITUARY

Horst Funeral.

Funeral services for the Rev. John K. E. Horst, 62, pastor of St. Mathews Lutheran Church, North Side, will be held Monday at 2 p. m. in the church, with representatives of the Eastern district of the Lutheran Synod of Missouri, of which he was president, and of the mission board of the church conducting the services. The Rev. Francis Verwiebe, of Buffalo, first vice president of the Eastern district, will speak in German and the Rev. J. George Spilman, of Baltimore, secretary of the nission board, will speak in English. The Rev. Mr. Horst died Thursday while visiting at the home of a parishoner. He had been pastor of St. Matthews for more than 28 years. He was born in Waconia, Minn., and attended Concordia College at Milwaukee and Ft. Wayne, Ind. He was graduated from Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, in 1891, and was ordained at Glastonburg, Conn. He served pastorates in Cortland, Minn., and Fort Smith, Ark., going to St. Matthews in 1902. He leaves four sons Joseph and John, of Pittsburgh; Ernest, of El Paso, Tex., and Mark, of St. Louis, and a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Staving, of Pittsburgh.

Helfrich Funeral.

Funeral services for Jacob Helfrich, 67, McKees Rocks contractor, who died Thursday in his home at 908 Second street, McKees Rocks, will be held Monday morning in St. Mary's Catholic Church in that borough. Mr. Helfrich was born in Bavaria and came to McKees Rocks 50 years ago. He had been a contractor in the borough 15 years. Mr. Helfrich was a member of the Men's Conference of St. Mary's Church and Branch No. 20, Knights of St. George. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Carolina Yost Helfrich; four sons, George, Charles, Joseph and Edward C. Helfrich; four daughters, Mrs. George T. Helfrich, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. E. T. Carroll, of Beaver Falls; Mrs. A. F. Kerin, of Crafton, and Miss Loretta Helfrich, at home, and two sisters and 16 grandchildren.

Kilpatrick Funeral.

Funeral services for the Rev. Dr. Alexander Kilpatrick, for more than 50 years pastor of the United Reformed Presbyterian Church, of Mars, who died yesterday, will be held in the church Monday afternoon. He was born in Bloomington, Ind., January 20, 1847, and was ordained and installed in the Mars church in 1876. He was a graduate of Indiana University, and attended the Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary. He served on the board of directors of Geneva College more than 40 years, and for 20 years was president of the Board. He leaves two sons, Robert, of Valencia, and Milligan Kilpatrick, of Richmond, Va., and two daughters, Mrs. Ethel Mathiott and Mrs. A. K. Laird, of Valencia.

Peters Funeral.

Funeral services for Mrs. Catherine Sinz Peters, 31, who died Thursday at her home, 1231 Voskamp street, will be held Monday in the Joseph A. Pappert funeral home, 711 Lockhart street, North Side. Following requiem high mass in St. Mary's Catholic Church, burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery. Mrs. Peters was born in Pittsburgh and was a member of St. Mary's Church. She leaves her husband, Joseph J. Peters; a son, Joseph J. Peters, Jr., and three sisters, Mrs. Anna Steuernagel, of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Adrian Lauth, of Canonsburg, and Mrs. Henry Coyle, of Butler.

FIRM EXPANDS FLOOR SPACE

A sign of improved business conditions is to be found in the announcement of Mitchell & Cook, Inc., office furnishers, Koppers Building, that the firm is preparing for the opening of additional quarters about March 15. When the Koppers Building was opened, less than two years ago, Mitchell & Cook, Inc., moved its business onto the second floor. Already the firm has found it necessary to increase its space to include a new showroom on the first floor, with a mezzanine immediately under its quarters on the second floor.

Around March 15, Mitchell & Cook, Inc., will open to the public a new three-story showroom containing a complete display of executive and commercial equipment. The firm is the local representative of the Macey Company, Grand Rapids, Mich., one of the leading manufacturers of office and institutional furniture in the world.

Mitchell & Cook, Inc., without charge to customers, offers expert decorating service, including wall decoration, draperies, floor coverings, pictures and accessories.

AWARD $12,500 IN DAMAGES

Damages of $12,500 were awarded Paul and Marie Kohler, of Penn Township, by a jury in Common Pleas Court, in their suit against Penn Township, for injuries suffered by Mrs. Kohler when she fell on an icy sidewalk in Travella boulevard, January 23, 1929. Her right leg was broken. The wife asked for $50,000 damages and the husband $15,000. The case was tried before Judge W. H. McNaugher.

Damages of $25.00 are asked in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court by Mrs. Libbie Siegel, 1516 Fallowfield street, against the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the Van Ormer Brick Company. She alleges that while she was a passenger on a street car it was struck by a truck of the brick company, at Penn and Trenton avenues, Wilkinsburg, last December 1, causing her serious injury.

Sheriff Ill, Deputy To Conduct Office

Chief Deputy Sheriff B. V. Coffey will take charge of the sheriff's office next week, when Sheriff Robert S. Cain will leave for Florida. It was said at the office that Cain was ordered South because of his health by his physician. He will be away until March 1.

STEEL OUTPUT IN SEASONAL TREND

First Quarter Production Expected to Run 5 to 8% Above Preceding Period

By B. E. V. LUTY

Chances are that steel production in the current quarter will run 5 to 8 per cent above fourth quarter. A precise statement is impossible partly because the prospective increase in rate during the remainder of the quarter cannot be guessed closely and partly because there is a question how much allowance should be made for holiday interruption in determining the fourth quarter producing rate for the purpose of comparison.

The official report of steel ingot production deducted only 24 hours' working time lost by Christmas and on that basis the January rate represented 19 per cent increase, but 15 per cent would probably be a fairer appraisal. As there was liquidation of stocks of ingots and semi-finished in December the increase in rate of shipping finished steel products was nearer 10 per cent. That would fully cover the seasonal increase to be expected in ordinary times when there is no outside influence.

GOOD NEWS

This means that by the showing to date steel has been behaving in usual seasonal manner since the first of the year, having been separated from the influence of recession in general business which kept dragging it down during the last 10 months of last year. That is a very important point and perhaps should be regarded as sufficient good news for the time being.

The feeling of disappointment widely expressed in the last three weeks indicates that more than seasonal improvement was expected, that there were hopes of general business getting on the upgrade enough to show the fact in steel. There is, however, no proof in history that in a major depression when business has stopped receding it begins the ascent at once.

LOOSE THINKING HIT

In comparing present and prospective conditions in steel with the past there is much loose thinking, for it is loose thinking to take last quarter as a basis, still more so to take the second half of last year or the whole year. The proper method is to take December as a basis, when the business recession had only completed affecting steel adversely, and build up on that basis. Allowing a little more holiday interruption than is taken in the official count, steel ingot production in December was about 25,000,000 tons a year, comparing with a fourth quarter average of about 28,500,000 tons and an actual production in the calendar year of 40,000,000 tons.

Building up on a 25,000,000-ton rate in December, the January rate was about 29,000,000 tons and the current rate as well as the average for February may be set at 30,000,000 tons. Usually steel improves markedly in January, only slightly in February, and decidedly more in March. Taking next month at about 32,000,000 tons, which seems reasonable, according to seasonal precedent, there would be an average of a little over 30,000,000 tons for the quarter, fully 20 per cent gain over the December rate and 6 per cent over the fourth quarter rate, but about 25 per cent under the 1930 actual total of 40,000,000 tons. As to earnings, the tonnage increase over fourth quarter might not be sufficient to balance the slighlty lower average price yield, for prices at the end of last year were a trifle under the average invoice prices of shipments during the quarter.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

AUTO MAKERS LIFT GLASS ORDERS

Reports State Additional Plant Capacity Will Be Put in Operation Soon

An outstanding feature of the sheet glass industry during the week appeared to be that the automobile trade is ordering a little heavier than earlier in the month, according to National Glass Budget.

Factory output of plate glass is understood to be quite a bit under the amount of glass made at the corresponding time in 1930. Reports are to the effect that it may be necessary to place additional plant capacity in operation at an early date. Glass most in demand is for use in the production of automobiles.

STOCKS LOWERED

During 1930 stocks of plate glass were reduced about 3,000,000 square feet, according to an unofficial estimate. There were 105,824,074 square feet of plate glass manufactured in the United States during 1930. Imports of plate glass into this country during the first 11 months of 1930 just exceeded 5,000,000 square feet; therefore, the requirements of the country during the year under consideration were approximately 113,000,000 square feet. The plate glass market continues firm, with production and demand not running far apart. A large amount of the plate being produced just at present is three-eighths of an inch or under in thickness.

Demand for rough and wired glass is showing but little, if any, improvement. The market is extremely quiet. If any change is discernable in this country, it is that discounts show a further strengthening tendency. Operating capacity is at a low point.

WINDOW GLASS

The window glass industry appears to be able to pick up some new annoyance or trouble every week. Affairs in this business are said to be growing more unsatisfactory, according to men prominent in the business. The market is not assuming any firmer tone and a considerable amount of complaint is heard.

Statisticians say that small construction work in on the increase. It is in this class of work that window glass is used most extensively. With the arrival of spring weather there should be still further increased activity in the building business, which would have a beneficial effect on the window glass business.

FUME VICTIM RECOVERING

Found unconscious from carbon monoxide gas in his garage, John Mullins, 25, of 15 Kittanning street, Etna, today was reported recovering in his home. Prompt arrival of Motorcycle Patrolman William McNally and Joseph Zgyello, driver of the borough fire truck, with an inhalator was accredited with having saved his life.

Mrs. Mary Mullins, 25, discovered her husband unconscious when she entered the garage in the rear of their home at 7 p. m.

Dr. A. J. Blackwood, of Dewey street, Etna, was summoned, and he called McNally and Zygello. The patrolman and fireman used the inhalator on Mullins 35 minutes before he recovered consciousness.

BEAUTY COURSE IN NEW SCHOOL

Cosmetics, hair dressing, costume designing and tea room operation courses will be available to girls attending the $800,000 vocational high school to be erected soon at Bailey avenue and Cornell street, McKeesport.

Twenty-eight trades will be taught, including radio and automobile mechanics and telephone work.

The proposed school will be of the modern factory type, ranging from one to five stories, with a majority of shops on the first floor.

The structure is an outstanding project of a four-year building and reconditioning program which the Board of Public Education began three years ago, and for which more than $500,000 has been expended.

TAFT PRAISES MANAGER PLAN

The city manager form of government as a step toward extinction of machine politics was stressed by Attorney Charles Taft II, of Cincinnati, son of the former President, in an address before the Allegheny County League of Women Voters yesterday in Carnegie Music Hall. He said that if independent voters wish to free their cities of machine control they must find their leadership among young men.

Attorney Taft, former prosecutor of Hamilton County, O., described the successful effort made in Cincinnati to set up the city manager form of government. He said:

"First, find your local leadership among young men; second, amend your state constitutions so that you control your own destinies free from typical machine legislature; third, adopt a charter with small council elected at large proportional representation; fourth, organize your independent citizens in every ward and precinct behind a representative ticket of able citizens, and, finally, maintain and expand your organization and never relax your vigilance."

VICTIM'S PLEA FREES WOMAN

Deputy Sheriff H. O. Thomas, badly burned by a bucket of lye thrown on him when he attempted to dispostes tenants at 318 West Fifth avenue, McKeesport, asked Judge George V. Moore yesterday in Criminal Court not to send Mrs. Ester Wargo, 34, who threw the lye to jail.

Heeding this appeal, the court waived jail sentence, ordered Mrs. Wargo to make restitution of $100 to Thomas and placed her on probation for two years when she admitted throwing the lye on the officer.

Thomas told the court that Mrs. Wargo refused to admit him to her home, forcing him to break a window to get into the place. In the kitchen she upset the bucket of lye on him, burning his face and arms.

Destroy Bar, Mash In Farmhouse Raid

Thirty-two cases of home brew and large quantities of beer mash were destroyed by prohibition agents and constables in a raid on a farmhouse near Coraopolis yesterday, the agents reported. George Heinlein, 34, was arrested and released on his own recognizance.

Cash Funds in Fixed Trusts Discussed

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

SOME OF THE well known distributive fixed trusts included reserve funds in their investment portfolios. To properly understand this, it is helpful to review a portion of the early history of this class of investment.

Fixed trusts first came into popularity early in 1929 when stock prices were high and the yields on common stocks were small. In order to make the shares of fixed trusts attractive to investors, most of the pioneers in the field offered the distributive type. The organizers felt it necessary to depend on the proceeds from the sale of stock dividends and split-ups to sweeten the yields of their shares. The upset in the prices of stocks since that time has restored yields to levels which have made it possible to organize cumulative fixed trusts on an attractive basis. The distributive type has continued in existence, however, because of its apparently higher yield.

Need for Reserve Funds

IN THE EARLY DAYS of the distributive trusts, investment bankers realized that sooner or later the bull market would come to an end and that a break in stocks would be accompanied by a period in which stock dividends and split-ups would be few. To guard against loss of revenue from this source, reserve funds were established. Each of the fixed trust units included a specified amount of cash in addition to the stocks in the investment portfolio. This cash fund naturally increased the offering price of the fixed trust shares.

The coupons of the shares of fixed trusts which have reserve funds provide for a minimum payment. If the earnings of the trust exceed the minimum, the full amount of revenue is paid to shareholders. If the earnings fall below the minimum a portion of the reserve fund is used to make up the difference. If earnings exceed the minimum in subsequent years the excess is used to replace the reduction in the fund. After the fund is restored full distributions are resumed.

Conditions Changed

WITH THE CHANGE in the condition of the stock market the cumulative trusts have come into importance. In this class of fixed trusts there is less probability of wide fluctuations in income since stock dividends and split-ups do not form a part of distributions. Accordingly the cumulative trusts rarely have reserve funds.

Fixed trusts have been in existence for such a short time that those with reserve funds have not yet had occasion to dip into them. It seems quite probable, however, that some of the distributive trusts will use part of their reserve funds this year. There are few chances for capital distribution in prospect. When it is remembered that some of the distributive trusts derived over 80 per cent of their 1930 payments from split-ups and stock dividends, the prospects for the present year become quite obvious.

While most of the cumulative trusts have no reserve funds, their revenue in 1931 will show little change since payments are dependent on cash dividends alone.

Money Not at Work

THE CHIEF OBJECTION to reserve funds is that the investor is compelled to put up money which is not doing any work for him. This, in conjunction with the other nonproductive costs of fixed trusts, reduces the proportion of capital actually working to less than 80 per cent in some cases.

In some trusts, interest is paid on the reserve funds but this is usually at the New York Clearing House rate which is low. In addition there is no opportunity for appreciation in the value of the portion of the investment in the reserve fund.

One of the largest fixed trusts pays no interest on the reserve fund to its shareholders. The interest goes to the investment organization sponsoring the trust. This affords a large amount of revenue to a group which has risked no capital and has performed no services to deserve it. Until recently the circulars of this particular trust neglected to mention this rather important fact. Lately they have stated that the interest is used to pay trustee's fees and other expenses. The explanation is rather thin, however, since other trusts exist and pay these expenses out of initial charges which are no larger than those of the trust in question.

In general there seems to be little justification for including reserve funds in fixed trusts except as a means to cover up the failure of distributive trusts to make large enough capital distributions in years when stock dividends and split-ups are lean.

ELEVATOR FIRM ADDS PRODUCT

The Marshall Brothers Company a few months ago added to their elevator factory a division for the manufacture of fire doors for elevators, factories, schools and theaters. Now the firm has further expanded its large business by the introduction of the automatic push button door operator. This device has a large application for operating garage doors of all kinds as well as doors for fire engine companies, public and private garages and warehouses.

The electric control consists of an "up" button and a button for "stop" while door is moving up or down. In addition to the operating buttons, which are usually located at an exit door, a key switch is located in the driveway at a convenient point from which the door may be opened and closed without one having to leave one's car. The electric engine or motor is equipped with a powerful magnetic brake which holds the door at any elevation desired.

The power for operating the motor is taken from an electric light circuit and requires no special or complicated electric connections, making an installation of the greatest simplicity and durability.

An unusual feature of this mechanism is the "release," so designed that if the power should be discontinued from any cause, the door may be opened or closed by hand.

The factory of the Marshall Company is located at Twenty-first and Mary streets, South Side.

Court Approves Offer for Almar

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—The offer of J. R. Peters for the assets of the Almar Stores Company was approved by Judge Kirkpatrick in U. S. District Court here.

The Peters offer, made on behalf of a syndicate, provides for the payment of $110,000 in cash, wholesale prices for the merchandise and other inventory, assumption of existing leases on 257 stores and the warehouse.

Motor Products Exports Increase

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14. — Exports of automotive products from the U. S in 1930 were valued at $298,814,508 or an increase of about 8.3 per cent over the average yearly shipments for the period 1920-28, the Commerce Department announces. Imports last year amounted to $1,857,743, a decrease of 46 per cent from the 1929 total.

BUSINESS HERE SHOWS LITTLE CHANGE

Some Lines Report Slight Improvement in Buying; Furniture Sales Fair

There has been comparatively little change in the business situation although some lines report buying showing a slight improvement, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Retailers are doing considerable advertising to bring sales up to somewhat near normal, and considering the lower prices as compared with a year ago, seem to be transacting a volume of business approximately 10 per cent lower than last year at this time.

Jobbers of dry goods, and wearing apparel generally, report orders comparatively small and for immediate needs, and inventories seem to be averaging decidedly lower than is usual at this period. Jewelers report sales decidedly below normal, but dullness has prevailed in that line for more than a year, and business is not much smaller in volume than it was.

COLLECTIONS SLOW

Hardware sales continue slow, and paint, while in slightly better demand, is not moving very freely. There is a moderate increase in demand for wallpaper. Construction work continues quiet and demand for lumber and other building material shows but little improvement. February furniture sales seem to be producing fair results, but prices are considerably lower than they were a year ago. Groceries and provisions are in fair demand, with prices averaging somewhat lower.

Production of crude oil continues at about the same rate as last week, and prices show comparatively little change. There has been no material improvement in the demand for bituminous coal and the rate of production continues about 20 to 25 per cent lower than it was last year at this time.

Although there has been a slight improvement in a few lines, collections in this territory continue to average slow as a whole.

BROKERS' LOANS UP $33,000,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Loans on stocks and bonds to brokers and dealers by reporting Federal Reserve member banks in New York City increased $33,000,000 during the week ending February 12 to $1,749,000,000. This is the first increase in seven weeks, and compares with $1,716,000,000 in the preceding week and the record high of $6,804,000,000 on October 2, 1929.

Three Big S. O. Concerns May Get Together

—By B. C. FORBES—

A MUCH bigger oil merger than any yet mentioned may be arranged by Standard Oil companies provided the Standard Oil of New York - Vacuum Oil combination is not forbidden by the United States Supreme Court. Isn't it ridiculous that foreigners should be permitted to operate all over the United States and that the same privilege should be denied American citizens? The Dutch Shell Union interest practically covers the world.

Mr. Forbes

Walter C. Teagle the mental and physical giant who heads Standard Oil of New Jersey is, I understand, ambitious to create an American organization capable of doing business practically all over the United States.

IF NO LEGAL OBSTACLES ARE RAISED, I AM TOLD THAT THE IDEA IS TO BRING TOGETHER THE STANDARD OIL COMPANIES OF NEW JERSEY, CALIFORNIA AND INDIANA.

THE NEW JERSEY Company operates mainly in the East (in addition to its foreign ramifications); the California company operates in the West, while the Indiana company covers a large section of the Middle West. By hooking up the three and then carrying out certain expansions, an enterprise of national scope would be created.

IT BECAME known long ago that Mr. Teagle and President Kenneth R. Kingsbury, of the Standard Oil of California, both saw very potent advantages in combining forces. No definite steps were taken because of uncertainty over the attitude of the courts. Now, however, that the Federal Statutory Court of St. Louis has indorsed the New York-Vacuum get-together, both Standard Oil concerns prospects for the Teagle-Kingsbury plan have become distinctly brighter.

INCLUSION OF the Indiana company is now looked upon as extremely desirable. Nothing at all definite has yet been arranged, but that is how the wind blows.

The disintegration of the old "Standard Oil Trust" has been more thorough than the public imagine. There is today in many directions as keen competition between Standard Oil companies as between any other oil rivals. Heads of S. O. companies are, for the most part, enterprising, wide-awake, aggressive fellows, each out to build up his own business. The success of each is not measured by what any other Standard Oil Company accomplishes but solely by the showing he can make for his own concern. Therefore, competition has greatly spread.

STOCK OWNERSHIP, too, is very different today from what it was in 1911, when "dissolution" was decreed. I am told that not 5 per cent of the Standard Oil of New Jersey stockholders of today owned a single share in 1911.

It is questionable whether any individual, not excepting John D. Rockefeller, owns stock in all the various existing Standard Oil companies. No longer can or does 26 Broadway crack the whip over the heads of the legions of Standard Oil executives scattered throughout the continent. True, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., retains some influence on a number of S. O. companies in which Rockefeller money is still invested. But I happen to know that he does not attempt to lay down the law to any of them. Once in a while he is appealed to when one Standard Oil Company starts doing things another Standard Oil company doesn't like. And on such occasions he does his best to act as a conciliator. But the head of each company is his own boss, subject not to any Rockefeller but to his stockholders.

THE PROSPECTIVE developments here outlined are not remotely likely to be effected tomorrow or the next day, but the trend is as here outlined for the first time.

IF CONGRESS were as eager to help business and employment as it is to play politics regardless of the soundness of its action or of the ultimate effect upon national prosperity, it would have overhauled our anti-trust laws long ago. These laws were drafted to fit the condition existing a generation ago. They have been outgrown. They are anachronistic. Industry and business have traveled fast and far since the early years of this century. Bigness has been in no small measure responsible for the ability of American business organizations to outstrip the rest of the world.

WHY, THEREFORE, should not Congress modernize our laws governing industry and business?

Had no more progress been made by industry and business than has been made in formulating laws governing industry and business, this land would not today be so far ahead of the rest of the world.

LESS RESERVE CREDIT OUT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—(AP)—The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credits outstanding during the week ending February 11, as reported by the Federal Reserve Bank, was $948,000,000, a decrease of $19,000,000 compared with the preceeding week and $233,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1930.

The Federal Reserve board reported that on February 11, total Reserve bank credit amounted to $929,0000,000, a decrease of $20,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with a decrease of $14,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and increases of $21,000,000 in treasury currency and $2,000,000 in monetary gold stocks, offset in part by an increase of $18,000,000 in money in circulation.

There was practically no change during the week in the system's holdings of discontinued bills, the principal changes by Federal Reserve banks being an increase of $7,000,000 at New York and of $2,000,000 each at Cleveland and San Francisco, and a decrease of $4,000,000 at Chicago and of $2,000,000 each at Atlanta and Kansas City. The system's holdings of bills bought in open market declined $16,000,000 and of United States bonds, $3,000,000, while holdings of treasury notes increased $2,000,000 and of treasury certificates and bills $1,000,000.

FILM REVIEWS, SHOW NOTES, HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM CHAT

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

A young woman who had been to the fortune teller told us about it. She said the fortune teller told her a light-complexioned man was going to give her some jewelry and she said that since she's been smiling her sweetest smile at every light-complexioned man she meets, but the results have been nil. The fortune teller also told her somebody was going to make her an offer of marriage — and this just the language the fortune-teller used—an offer of marriage.

Mr. Pfarr

This has always puzzled us. Every fortune teller we have ever heard quoted always said, "So-and-so will ask you to marry him." Fortune tellers apparently have a language of their own and that is it.

Fortune-telling, incidentally, seems to be on the up and going, and if you want to know why we'll tell you. It's the unemployment. This fortune teller we quoted never told a fortune until her husband lost his job some time ago. Then she got herself a deck of cards and whispered to the neighbors that she was ready to inform all customers that the black Jack meant a dark man and so forth.

* * *

We have never met a real, live fortune teller who moves and speaks—that is, one who operates with cards. And when we do we're going to ask her whether she gets the wholesale rate on the decks of cards she buys and how many fortunes she tell with one deck before the backs of the cards are broken.

We did meet a kind of fortune teller once. She looked at our hand and then at some maps and told all about us. She asked if we were in the banking business, the steel business and a half-dozen other kinds of business and finally she said, "I seem to see a sign here that you're interested in writing."

* * *

Carlton Ketchum, the advertising man, was scheduled to make a speech at the recent merchant tailors' convention here, but he had to go South. He asked his colleague, Vin Drayne, to substitute.

Drayne, too, had to leave at the last minute, so he called upon Ernie Giles. In fact, he gave Giles the speech he had planned to deliver.

Giles reached the meeting, gazed at the audience of tailors who make clothes to order, and decided that he would capture the attention of his listeners immediately, introduced himself with—

"Gentlemen, you see before you a man in a ready-made suit."

* * *

And then there's the man who, according to Ben Anderson, was arrested on a charge of impersonating an officer. He picked up a handful of peanuts from a vendor's stand.

The big moment in the life of Davey Roberts, the Fifth Ward politician, occurred at the banquet his friends gave him Thursday, which also was Lincoln's Birthday. Over the banquet table there was draped a wide American flag, hemmed on one side by a portrait of Lincoln and on the other by one of Davey.

Widow's 4 Children Share $31,500 Estate

Mrs. Caroline Schwartz, widow, of South Graham street, divided an estate of $31,500 among four children, Alice M. Schwartz, Mrs. Emma Stapleton, Mrs. Mary S. Pabst and Mrs. Margaret Barbour, in her will, probated in the office of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

EAST VAUGHN, N.M., Feb. 14.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

We left Texarkana at daylight in a hard rain and low fog. Made Fort Worth, then same condition clear across Texas, but here we hit a real snowstorm and Capt. Hawks couldn't see, so we landed on emergency government landing field. A committee immediately waited on me to speak here on behalf of snow relief fund. Friday the thirteenth may not be exactly unlucky, but it didn't do us a whole lot of good. Hawks just aid it's cleared a little and we can make Albuquerque. So long.

Janet Gaynor Will Appear In 'Daddy Long Legs' With Meighan

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 14.

Janet Gaynor's rest will be no longer than was expected, and when she does come back to the screen it will be in "Daddy Long Legs" not in "Merely Mary Ann."

This seems to be the final word on the star, who may be tiny in size, but who has showed the studio on more than one occasion that she has a mind of her own.

"Daddy Long Legs" was purchased some time ago, and was announced in this column, along with the fact that Thomas Meighan would appear in it with Janet. Since then "Merely Mary Ann" was advanced as the star's next picture, but now it has been postponed.

Janet Gaynor

Meighan is to play the role taken by Mahlon Hamilton in Mary Pickford's old silent version of "Daddy Long Legs." As you may recall, Marshall Neilan directed the earlier film, and played the juvenile lead. Al Santell will direct the talkie.

In as much as Meighan first has to make "Young Sinners" for Fox, Janet will be given an extended leave in which to recuperate from her recent appendicitis operation.

LATEST GOSSIP

After a visit to Lila Lee, John Farrow reports she is in good health and will be back in Hollywood before many weeks have passed. . . . John and Lila are engaged. . . . Harry Bannister and Ann Harding continue their passion for aviation. They own one plane and have ordered two more. Harry is almost ready to become a pilot. . . . Will Rogers will be back here in three weeks to start on his new picture. . . . "Cheer for the Blues" . . . A man from Pasadena offers to pay me $5,000 if I will arrange a marriage with a girl who has a dowry of $25,000. He's even willing to give 25 per cent of his salary if I secure him personal appearance engagements in motion picture theaters. . . . One of Hollywood's veteran studio employes is Major, the colored door-man at Pathe. He has had the same job since Thomas H. Ince built the studio.

CAN'T STOP BUSTER

Buster Keaton retains his sense of humor even after being assaulted in his dressing room by the irate Kathleen Key.

On the day after the fracas, a sign appeared on the door: CLOSED FOR REPAIRS.

This now has been replaced with the notice: OPEN UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

CLARA'S LEAD CHOSEN

Next weew Clara Bow will start her new picture, "Kick In," with Norman Foster as her leading man.

Norman Foster

Others in the cast will include Wynne Gibson and Regis Toomey.

"Kick In" was written by Willard Mack and once served as a vehicle for the actor-author and Marjorie Rambeau. John Barrymore also played in it at one time.

Lothar Mendes directs the talkie.

VAUDEVILLE AND FILMS IN BILLS THAT CHANGE TODAY

Two theaters change bills today. The Davis, with Miss Patricola on the stage and Edmund Lowe, in "Men On Call," on the screen, introduces a new program of vaudeville and motion pictures. In the Harris there also will be a combination show, five variety acts and "Captain Thunder," with Victor Varconi and Fay Wray.

Ed Wynn, "The Perfect Fool," in the Ziegfeld musical comedy, "Simple Simon," comes to the Shubert Alvin Theater next Monday night for a week.

"It's a Wise Child," comedy, by Laurence E. Johnson, author of several Broadway successes, is based on the old saw, "it is a wise child that knows its own father." The play will be offered by George Sharp's company in the Pitt next week.

Seats go on sale at 9 o'clock Monday morning in the box office of the Nixon for the new musical comedy, "Making Merry," which will open a week's engagement at the Nixon on Monday evening, February 23. This is the first time on any stage for this show, which is scheduled to open in the New Amsterdam in New York directly after the Pittsburgh premiere.

Richard Dix, Irene Dunne, Estelle Taylor, Edna May Oliver head the cast of "Cimarron," which continues on the Warner screen.

The Academy, following "Let's Go," which opens Sunday night with a midnight show, will begin its season of stock burlesque. Burlesque performers from the shows on the Mutual circuit will be in the stock company. The ensemble is now in rehearsal.

WARNS NO JOBS OPEN IN FILMS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Young men and women who plan motion picture careers would do well to work at their present jobs a while longer, William C. De Mille, director, warned today, saying:

"When the industry is so hard put to care for its own tried and experienced players, it is nothing short of tragedy for youngsters to try to break in."

He spoke as president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciencies.

Of 17,500 extras registered at the central casting bureau during 1930, he said, 922 averaged one day's work a week and but 95 worked as much as three days a week.

Seven thousand actors and actresses were registered and but six or seven were placed daily, he said.

MUSIC

SYRIA MOSQUE

PROGRAM

Overture to "The Secret of Suzanne" ..... Wolf-Ferrari
Symphony No. 7, in A major, Op. 92 ..... Beethoven
Concerto for two pianos and orchestra, in E flat major ..... Mozart
Two dances from the ballet "The Convent by the Water" ..... Casella
Dance of the Old Ladies
Children's Dance (Rondo)
Bolero ..... Ravel

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, under Henri Verbrugghen, played a brilliant concert in Syria Mosque, and certainly there is no more invigorating artist than this orchestra leader. He suffers not at all from the affectations of so many conductors, and quite naturally his players respond with enthusiasm.

J. Fred Lissfelt

There was an abundance of good music on this program. In both the Wolf-Ferrari overture and the Beethoven symphony the composers seemed so ill-tempered. In the "Secret of Suzanne" surely Wolf-Ferrari allowed his actors to play with their hysterical jealousy, but he had his tongue in his cheek the while. And the Beethoven Seventh is not such a breath-taking combat.

The novelty of the evening was Casella's two dances, certainly not innovations in orchestration nor in conception, but amusing enough music. Ravel's Bolero brought the concert to joyous close. This work is one of the masterpieces in modern orchestral music. It is the quintessence of dance rhythm and Spanish fervor, and Verbrugghen gave it an entrancing reading.

Maier and Pattison, famed players of two-piano music, played the Mozart Concerto in E flat major, and a Bach-Bauer Fantasy and Fugue as encores. It was the best demonstration of their art ever given in Pittsburgh.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Senorita

Fay Wray is the girl the hero gets in "Captain Thunder," a screen romance laid below the Rio Grande, which comes to the Harris screen today.

GRETA GARBO TOAST OF GAY PAREE IN PENN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Greta Garbo, the pale one, moves through an atmosphere of artist studios, sidewalk cafes and garret rooms in "Inspiration," her new picture in the Penn. This time, as a model, she is the toast of unconventional Paree. She inspires sculptors, painters and writers. She breaks their hearts.

Then one night at a gay party she sees true love standing on a balcony in the person of Robert Montgomery. He's supposed to be a student, studying for the consular service or something. He lights her cigaret and Romance goes on a spree.

Follows now a series of episodes in which Young Student hears rumblings of her past. He leaves her and returns to her. He leaves her again and goes back to her. For a third time this happens. Then she leaves him.

UNHAPPY BUT NOBLE

Her exit is in the form of one of those noble gestures the movies like to gesture. She won't "ruin" his life, so she goes away. She will be unhappy, she knows, and he'll be unhappy, too. But why be happy when you can be noble seems to be the order of things.

"Inspiration" is one of those modern romances. It has been cleverly directed by Clarence Brown. There are moments of keen screen craftsmanship. There are moments when the censors shut the characters' mouths.

Miss Garbo gives another of her effective, but baffling performances. Somehow, she appears different from the Garbo of old. Is it that she has become less theatrical and more sincere? Perhaps!

Mr. Montgomery gives a quiet but impressive performance as leading man. And Lewis Stone, Marjorie Rambeau and Beryl Mercer are others that carry on with complete knowledge of acting technique.

A SPOOFING M. C.

The stage show, "Nite Lites," isn't startling, but it is entertaining. Harry Rose, as master of ceremonies, doesn't have a serious moment. In fact, he succeeds in burlesquing masters of ceremonies who take themselves seriously. The four Lees, clever, but goofy lads, have a novel act of nonsense. Deno and Rochelle give a rough and ready Apache dance display. The Condos brothers tap, and a blonde little girl steps from among the Chester Hale Steppers for a specialty.

Sixteen-year-old Robert Conche continues to lead the overture and Dick Leibert smiles and plays through an organlogue.

Show Boat to Stage Ed Lowry Farewell

A theatrical night will be held next Wednesday in honor of Ed Lowry on the Show Boat, floating night club. The event is being staged as a farewell to Lowry who ends his engagement in the Stanley next Thursday. Producer Joe Hiller, who attended Lowry's farewell in St. Louis prior to his coming here, hopes to outdo that event.

Menjou to Portray M. E. in 'Front Page'

Adolphe Menjou, casting aside his topper and stick, has been given the role of the managing editor in "The Front Page!" This is the part that Louis Wolheim was to have played, until illness precluded that possibility.

The Follies Girl

As the wind blows savagely, her ankles and legs, already so generously exposed, merge into the welcome beauty of her dimpled knees, and men's eyes, enthralled, peer and peer, while men's thoughts, eager and desirous, follow her, entrap her, enfold her. So just as man must always follow woman—in his heart, at least—so also must an entire world, on fire with imaginings, respond to the spell of the words "Follies beauty."

Can anyone account for the persistent endurance of this interest? Does anyone know why the mystery of the Follies girl augments itself and intensifies? In so far as these United States are concerned, the answer is easy.

The Follies girl is the only remaining symbol of our love, of freedom, our last evidence of the joy of living, for we, being Volstead-bound, have lost all claims to gaiety. Our books are censored, our theaters are policed, our night clubs padlocked, our holidays curbed. The Follies girl is our defy to the Puritans. She is the final dash of color to a drab existence.

But what, after all, is a Follies girl like? Once she is dissociated from the glamour and surroundings, what sort of a girl is she? Is she a goddess, a super-woman, or a mortal? Is she simply a chorus girl? Is she a highbrow or a dumbbell, a gold-digger or an innocent? Is she real, or just an illusion?

The answer to these questions everyone wants to know. They pop up at society dinners and public banquets, quilting bees and church socials, at christenings and poker games, in skyscrapers and on the prairies, in New York and Keokuk, Ia. Therefore, in order that curiosity may be forever appeased, the answer to all these matters is now presented for the first time. Here it is, compact, definite.

The "Follies" girls are and are not everything that they are supposed to be. They are absolutely as beautiful as they are said to be; and then, again, they are not so beautiful. They are accessible in the same ratio that they are unattainable. In other words—try to find out!

Where does she come from? That's easy. From Main Street and Broadway, from Newark and Paris, Yonkers and London, Budapest and Dublin, from every place that there is beauty, but most abundantly, of course, from these United States. Usually the smallest towns.

What becomes of her? Nobody knows. That is, scores fade into obscurity, while others are household names.

Dolores married wealth, and lives now in Paris.

Marion Davies, Billie Dove and Ina Claire, after battling for recognition, are now acknowledged as topnotchers in motion pictures.

Mae Murray triumphed on the stage and screen.

Gladys Glad is the winner of several important beauty prizes.

Jacqueline Logan and Dorothy Mackaill are screen stars.

Jessie Reid made a brilliant marriage.

Peggy Fears married A. D. Blumenthal, millionaire.

Ruby De Remer, famous beauty and film star, married wealth.

Streaks of tragedy have occasionally obscured the beauty.

Olive Thomas died at the height of her success.

Flo Leeds had sensational headlines.

Martha Mansfield died in an accident.

Kay Laurel, after a plucky rise on the legitimate stage, died under tragic circumstances.

Then there was Myrna Darby.

Mary Lygo, well-known screen player, took her own life.

Marion Roberts was wrecked by the newspapers.

Concerning the "Follies" traditions, it is necessary that the following statements be made:

There are, also, no more stage-door johnnies. The tribe is extinct. The girls of the "Follies" get home somehow without them.

Not every girl in the "Follies" has a Rolls-Royce. Claire Luce, for instance, rides frequently in an airplane.

The girls in the "Follies" do not wear the clothes and underclothes which they sport in magazine advertisements.

They don't learn the perfect "Follies" walk by carrying pails of water on their heads. They "peacock" by instinct.

They don't have Wall Street brokers buy them places in the "Follies." They get in by their own ability and force of beauty.

Not all of them wear diamond bracelets. Flo Kennedy prefers a tiara.

They don't all have apartments on Riverside Drive. Some of them owe for their room rent.

Not all of them spend their vacations abroad. Some of them go to Bermuda or Palm Beach, Hollywood, the Riviera.

The "Follies" girl is a superb representative of the American spirit, determined, ambitious. She walks in beauty. She nurtures romance. She proves that the girl with character is peeress of all other women who work; that she is lovable in the sense that wives, mothers and sweethearts are lovable; that she is to be admired among celebrities, social leaders and queens.

Hilda Ferguson, who joined the Ziegfeld crew in 1921 (when she was 15), still is beautiful. She has a trick, she was saying the other night, to keep the wrinkles from lining her face, particularly under the orbs.

"You can drink all the liquor you like," was her counsel, "so long as you drink two quarts of water daily."

Mr. Ziegfeld, by the way, is planning to engage a number of his one-time "Follies" eyefuls for his next "Follies"—and an added feature will be their beautiful daughters.

Peggy Joyce, who started her stage career with the "Follies," has made her will, which bequeathes half of her riches to her mother, and the rest to a Home for Girls in Distress.

The "Follies" girl, therefore, mellows—with age.

FULTON AND SHERIDAN HAVE 'COHENS-KELLYS'

By MARGARET RUSSELL

"The Cohens and the Kellys in Africa" is the screen feature in the Fulton and Sheridan Square. Charlie Murray and George Sidney own a piano store in New York. Because the celluloid keys on their pianos do not hold up well under strain, they go to Africa to get some ivory. They are chased by lions, captured by cannibals, lost in a harem and charged by wild elephants. Their wives, Kate Price and Vera Gordon, are kidnaped by gorillas and held for ransom by a sheik. Cohen and Kelly rescue their wives and each other in hectic confusion. They not only get their ivory, but sell all their old pianos to the natives of the jungle.

In the Fulton a short feature, "The 20th Amendment," depicts life in 1950. A screen song cartoon, "I Wonder Who's Kissin' Her Now," and news reels of the Prince of Wales and Bill Tilden complete the program.

The Sheridan Square bill also contains supplementary attractions.

'The Unholy Garden' Next Colman Film

"The Unholy Garden," an original screen play by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, has been acquired by Samuel Goldwyn as a vehicle for Ronald Colman. The co-authors of "The Front Page" outlined their story, which is on "the port of missing men" theme last week to Mr. Goldwyn, who immediately commissioned them to prepare the screen play in final form. It will be the first swashbuckling adventure story for Colman since the days of his "Beau Geste."

MR. ED LOWRY SAYING GOODBY ON STAGE IN STANLEY

By J. G. SHRADLE

Ed Lowry might just as well be given first mention in a review of the Stanley Theater's offering, which opened yesterday, because it's farewell time for another master of ceremonies and he is the voyager.

Of course, there is a screen attraction, "Illicit" by name, but the audience seemed centered on making Lowry sing some of his former song hits. The departing M. C. is surrounded with a stage attraction labeled "Farewell Week." The various acts form an entertaining bill.

In the "Four Queens" the audience finds novel rythmatic dance steps. Mae Joyce is a petite blond who sings charmingly. Les Ghezzis are two men offering remarkable handbalancing. Rome and Gaut are two comics, who sprinkle a little of this and that into fun moments.

Barbara Stanwyck is the vibrant star of "Illicit." Love without marriage was what she wanted, but the man sought both love and marriage. She finds her theory has nothing binding and surrenders to conventionalities to bring the story to a finish. The cast includes James Rennie, Charles Butterworth, Joan Blondell, Natalie Moorhead and Ricardo Cortez.

KENTUCKY PIONEERS ON ALDINE SCREEN

By MILDRED FILLMORE

John Mack Brown, dressed up like a Daniel Boone, finds himself in pioneer Kentucky atmosphere in "The Great Meadow," the new picture in the Aldine. Eleanor Boardman is there, too, striving to be a typical pioneer woman. She goes barefoot and everything.

The picture, which isn't very effective, is based on Elizabeth Madox Roberts' novel of the same name.

There is an Indian battle, with the settlers barricaded in the stockade and that sort of thing. But it isn't much of a fight.

Mr. Brown goes into the wilderness to bring vengeance on an Indian chief who murdered his mother. He's gone two years. By the time he gets back his wife—this is Miss Boardman's role—has married another man. But even this situation doesn't arouse much interest.

The cast includes Lucille La Verne, Anita Louise and Gavin Gordon.

Browning Directing Ayres in 'Iron Man'

Ned Sparks and Mildred Van Dorn have been added to the cast of "Iron Man" by W. R. Burnett, which Tod Browning is producing at Universal City. Lew Ayres is starred and in the support are Jean Harlow, Robert Armstrong and John Miljan.

DICK POWELL REVUE, EDMUND LOWE FILM IN ENRIGHT SHOW

A new Dick Powell revue, "Vanities of 1931," and Edmund Lowe's new film, "Men On Call," co-feature the new bill in the Enright. Mr. Powell sings, takes the stage band through a specialty or so and introduces the various entertainers, including Bobby Joyce and company and the two comics, Dooley and Sales.

John Blystone directed the picture, which is a romance of the Coast Guard. The story concerns two fellows who love the same girl. Naturally the right man gets the lady at the finale.

Storm at sea and a rescue create some excitement.

Mr. Lowe's supporting cast includes Mae Clark, as heroine; William Harrigan, Warren Hymer, Sharon Lynn and Ruth Warren.

An organlogue and short screen entertainment complete the bill.

PANTHER FIVE WILL PLAY ON COAST

WITH SENSATIONAL TEAMS being turned out from year to year by one of the country's ablest coaches in the person of Dr. H. C. Carlson, the basketball fame of the University of Pittsburgh has spread to such an extent that the local institution has just gained two new marks of floor distinction which has never before fallen to any other eastern college. For one thing there is such a clamor on the Pacific Coast for a chance to see the Panthers in action that it has been decided to play a series of games out there next winter in response to some pressing invitations, which means that the Blue and Gold passers will be the first eastern college five ever to make the long trip to the far West.

Dr. H. C. Carlson

And for another thing, Pitt has been honored by being chosen by vote of the student body of one of the big universities in the Western Conference as the most desirable attraction in the country for an extra game in addition to the regular schedule with Big Ten opponents, and has been invited to make a trip for such a contest.

THE MID-WESTERN college extending the latter invitation was the University of Wisconsin, and it is learned from Madison that news of the students' verdict was sent to W. Don Harrison, director of athletics at Pitt, and also to Coach Carlson by Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, Wisconsin coach and one of the biggest national figures in basketball.

Before filling a date that was open for a non-conference game in nex. season's schedule, the Wisconsin athletic authorities decided to be governed by the wishes of the students, and asked them to vote on what they considered the best team in the country and on the most popular attraction that could be booked for a game in Madison outside the Big Ten. When ballots were counted Pitt was found to be the first choice of the students by an overwhelming majority.

Dr. Meanwell at once told Director Harrison and Coach Carlson of the vote and its result, and invited the Panthers to meet Wisconsin on the latter's floor next season on the available date. But Madison advices say he has since received Pitt's regrets, with the explanation that the team will not be able to accept on account of the proposed trip to the coast.

The journey to the Far West is to be made during the Christmas holidays, so that the players will not lose any classroom time, and the traveling and playing scehdule already arranged fills the available period to such an extent that an extra stop for a game in Madison was considered inadvisable.

IN THE PICKING of all-time baseball clubs, Bill McKechnie is one well-qualified judge who does not string along with the accepted custom of picking Jimmy Collins for third base. McKechnie can see no third sacker, past or present, in the same class with Pie Traynor, and names the Pirate captain for the hot corner in an all-time team he has just selected. Bill chose only players whom he had actually seen in action. He named Christy Mathewson and Rube Waddell as pitchers, Johnny Kling and Mickey Cochrane as catchers, George Sisler at first base, Napoleon Lajoie at second, Honus Wagner at shortstop, Al Simmons in left field, Ty Cobb in center field and Babe Ruth in right field.

Rogers Hornsby

THE PIRATES' LEAD in adding soccer to their list of training exercises for the coming conditioning session at Paso Robles will be followed by at least one other National League club, the Cubs.

Rogers Hornsby shares the belief of other soccer supporters that there is no better exercise for legs and the wind. The Cub skipper figures that it will be particularly beneficial to his pitchers and he means to give them a stiff course of it on Catalina Island.

HORNSBY CONTENDS THAT a pitcher is no better than his legs and that a lot of ball games are lost because the man in the center of the diamond cannot cover ground. "Failure to get about puts more pitchers in the hole than any other fault," he said.

"It also upsets all the plans that an infield can make for defensive work. A slovenly pitcher handicaps the whole infield and pulls too many men out of position. I think soccer will benefit our pitchers."

IT WILL BE like a return of the good old days in basketball here to see the South Side Market House figuring again as the scene of floor contests after a lapse of two years during which it was occupied by a miniature golf course. For many seasons basketball and the Market House on the South Side were inseparable, and the restoration of the hall to the place it so long held in the game, with the new bleachers and other improvements that are planned for the home games of the Fintex team, of the County League, is certain to help the sport in this district.

THE PITTSBURGH BASEBALL Club will not book any exhibition games at home with American League teams this year. The Pirate officials have learned from experience that the visiting club, as a rule, will not keep its promise to use its regular lineup in such affairs, and the men who are used do little more than go through the motions of playing ball.

President Barney Dreyfuss says it is unfair to the fan, who generally get nothing but disappointment out of it, and that if he cannot give his patrons a real ball game he will at least protect them to the extent of not booking any exhibition numbers.

THOUGH LEN HARVEY again lost the decision to Vince Dundee in New York last night in his second 12-round American test, the English middleweight must be given credit for a showing that keeps him from being labeled a failure in this country.

Ray Conger

As on the first occasion, Harvey did so well that the verdict was booed by the crowd. One of the judges and many of the spectators thought he had won. In any event he has not yet been eliminated. He is deserving of further tests and is still to be reckoned with by the other middleweight title seekers.

SINCE RAY CONGER recently ran a mile indoors in 4 minutes 13.6 seconds, followers of track sports have been firmly of the belief that he can beat the world indoor record of 4:12. The anticipated record-breaking performance may come as early as next Monday night, according to George Bullwinkle, I. C. 4-A. outdoor mile champion, who is to meet Conger in the Baxter Mile in New York that evening. "If Conger beats me he'll break the tape in world record time," Bullwinkle predicts. "I intend to run the first three-quarters in 3:09. That will leave 63 seconds for the last quarter to tie the world record of 4:12. A good miler usually does his last quarter in 61 or 62 seconds. If Conger can stick with me through the first three-quarters it stands to reason he will have to go under 4:12 to win the race."

FAST BATTLE EXPECTED AT LOCAL RINK

By CARL W. SHATTO.

The Yellow Jacket puckmen will be out to put some artistic finishing touches to a week of noteworthy hockey conquest tonight when they meet the London Tecumsehs in an International League fixture at Duquesne Garden.

During the last fortnight the Jackets and Tecumsehs have been traveling at a faster pace than any other clubs in the circuit, and when the two speeding ice machines collided at London Thursday the dopesters predicted that the battle would be fast and fierce and the score very close.

And was the score close? Well, rather! It was a 2-2 deadlock, and those who know their hockey realize that the local skaters achieved no mean feat when they held the Tecumsehs to a tie on the latters' home ice. Just prior to Pittsburgh's invasion of London the Tecumsehs had whitewashed Buffalo, 3-0, and blanked Windsor 3-0. Buffalo and Windsor are first and second, respectively, in the league standings, and both combine a powerful attack with a strong defense. Neither Buffalo nor Windsor could score a goal on London—and Pittsburgh scored two. Neither Buffalo nor Windsor could hold London to less than three goals—and Pittsburgh held the Tecumsehs to two. A neat feat!

JACKETS HOLD EDGE

But why pore over the records? Because the situation that prevails tonight is identical to the situation that prevailed on Thursday, and because the records provide the only worthwhile tipoff on what is likely to happen when these fast, powerful clubs renew their warfare.

The only change in the situation is that whereas on Thursday the Tecumsehs held whatever advantage home ice offers, the Jackets tonight will have that edge. Although slight, the home surroundings advantage often is worth while. The Schooley skaters could get no better than a 1-1 tie with the Indians in Cleveland last Sunday, but on Tuesday they brought 'em here and downed 'em, 1-0. The strong vocal support of local fandom again may prove the weight that tilts the victory scales Pittsburghward.

The Tecumsehs own third place in the league standings, and the Jackets can advance to within a game and a half of the third notch by chalking up a triumph. Cleveland is host to Syracuse tonight, and should the Star take the Champs, the locals can move up into a play-off berth. And a Pittsburgh defeat tonight? Well, let's save our groans, Oscar.

FIERCE DUEL EXPECTED

At that, a Pittsburgh defeat is well within the realm of possibility. The Tecumsehs' starting front line, made up of Neville, Quenneville and Groh, is just about the fastest that the circuit has to offer. Holway and Hicks are so big that they can do a lot of defending, and Stuart is no chump in the nets. London won a hard-fought, thrilling overtime battle the last time the boys from across the border appeared here. Fortunately, there is no law compelling history to repeat.

The Jackets anticipate a fierce duel, and they are glad that all hands are in fine condition for a bitter test. The heavy advance ticket sale indicates that local fandom doesn't think the joust is going to be any tea party. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh		London
Cox	G	Stuart
Fraser	D	Hicks
Reise	D	Holway
Rodden	C	Neville
McCurry	W	Queeneville
Gregg	W	Groh

Scores—Pittsburgh: McGuire, Halliday, Montyre, Ouellette, Proudlock, White, Fields. Matte; London: Huard, Pettinger, Reinikka, Laughlin, Schneider, Elliott.

JACKETS BUY VOKES

Eddie Vokes, a sensation in Pacific Coast hockey last year, who cost the Chicago Blackhawks a lot of money, has been purchased by the Yellow Jackets. Vokes has been sent to Niagara Falls, the Jacket farm, for more seasoning.

BOWLERS AT CHARLEROI

Charleroi and Youngstown (O.) bowlers will meet at Charleroi at 9:30 tonight in a match in which the prize is to be a $1,000 purse. The Youngstown team won a previous match there recently. Tom Richards, Syl Bolaskis, Lachendro, Schiefroma and Culer are to be the Charleroi representatives.

Friday, 13th Brings Son to Klaases

It was Friday, the Thirteenth, and raining. At 5 p. m., Mr. Stork quit flapping his wings and knocked on the door of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Klaas, 320 Lincoln avenue, Millvale, and delivered a baby boy.

Harry is by way of being the silver-tongued announcer at local boxing shows. He also is a fine tenor singer. This is the third child. The others are Harry, Jr., aged 8, and Grace, aged 6.

Mother and son are doing well and father hopes to be in good voice again by the time Motor Square Garden resumes its boxing shows on March 3.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEYS CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: A PRIVATE WHO REFUSED TO BE A GENERAL—Theophile Malo Correct de la Tour d'Auvergne (1743-1780), whose memory France venerates as the "Premier Grenadier de la Republique," enlisted as a private at the age of 40. For 18 years he led an army of 8,000 grenadiers from victory to victory, consistently refusing the rank of general tendered him by successive heads of the French government. After his death at the battle of Neuberg, in 1800, his heart was embalmed and carried before his army corps for 14 years. His name was retained on the roll of his company. The mental stature of this great soldier was gigantic withal. He was the master of 44 languages and the author of many books on linguistics. The numerous wars of which he was a veteran include our own Revolutionary War. TWO GRAVESTONES FOR MAT LAXTON—Matthew Laxton, who died more than 100 years ago, was buried in the parish churchyard at Pinchbeck, near Spaulding, England. His relatives were divided in two groups over the choice of ground for his burial and, to settle the dispute, a tombstone was erected on each spot. The story is told in an English trade periodical, "The Undertaker's Journal," and was reprinted in the American "Embalmer's Monthly."

Second place will be at stake tonight in the Pittsburgh Polo League as riders of the Three Hundred and Eighth Cavalry and Shady Side Academy clash in the Hunt Armory in the fourth league contest.

Shady Side, with a victory over the Vangs, is in undisputed possession of the runner-up post at this time, with the Cavalrymen next in line. A victory tonight for the Soldiers will bring them up on even terms with the Academics.

Both teams will have their regular lineups available for tonight's affair. For Shady Side, Aaron will ride as No. 1, with the clever Dave McCahill in the No. 2 position and McCreery in at No. 3.

For the Cavalry, Lieut. Mazuzan will be at No. 1, with Lieut. Madden at No. 2 and Lieut. Perritt riding back. The game will get under way at 8:45 o'clock.

The lineups:

The collegiate basketball program, involving varsities of this battle front, takes a back seat tonight, despite the clash here between Carnegie Tech and Georgetown. West Virginia is holding its third annual track indoor and field games in its hotsy-totsy field house in Morgantown, where 18 colleges and universities and a score of high schools will be represented. This attraction usurps the major portion of the spotlight.

Eddie Tolan.

The basketball card, a supporting act to the track and field affair in West Virginia, consists of four games, besides the meeting between the Hoyas and Tartans here. These games bring together Pitt and Army at West Point; West Virginia and Penn State at State College; California Teachers and Slippery Rock at Slippery Rock and Salem and American University at Salem.

Operations are scheduled to commence in Morgantown at 1:30 this afternoon, with the running off of trial heats and semi-finals. In the evening all the finals will be held.

PITT, TECH ENTERED

Included among the list of entries are squads from Pitt, Tech, Geneva, Davis-Elkins, Bethany and West Virginia Wesleyan, from this district; Michigan, Ohio State from the Western Conference, and Michigan State, Lafayette, Penn State, Princeton, Georgetown, Catholic University, University of Detroit, and, of course, the home boys, West Virginia.

Among the stars of national prominence who are to perform are Eddie Tolan, the University of Michigan's famous "Midnight Express," official holder of the world's record for the 100-yard dash and prime favorite to capture the "Mountaineer 70" tonight; Everett Utterback, Pitt's star broad jumper and hurdler, who set a new record for the broad jump at the I. C. A. A. A. A. indoor meet last year; Paul Rekers, Charley Meisinger and Dick Detwiler, Penn State's famous middle and long distance trio; Clark Chamberlain, of Michigan State, national intercollegiate cross-country champion; Al Christenson, of Lafayette, who defeated Harold Cutbill, of Illinois, holder of the world mark for 1,000 yards; Howard Dawson, of Princeton, a Beaver Falls boy, star miler, and the crack relay quartet, anchored by Bill O'Neil.

All in all, a field of 200 college and 75 scholastic athletes will cavort in the spacious Mountain-

AQUATIC MEET HERE TODAY

Two hundred and thirty-six swimmers are to compete in a free aquatic carnival which is to get under way at the Pittsburgh Natatorium at 2:30 this afternoon.

Four Allegheny Mountain Association championships head a program which also includes novice races for men and women, a 60-yard free style event for men and fancy diving competitions. The title events on the card are 50-yard senior free style for women, 100-yard junior free style for women, 150-yard senior back for men and 220-yard free style for men.

The entry list, the largest ever recorded for an indoor meet here, boasts quality as well as quantity. Among the stars who rank with Western Pennsylvania's best who are to engage in the various competitions are Hanna and Cogswell, of Pitt; Cross, of Erie; Lindberg and Lebedda, of Homestead Library; Fred Wenck, of the P. A. A.; Choko and Semago, of Duquesne Library; McCoy, of the Downtown Y. and Paul Wyatt, of Unionown.

The organizations to be represented are Erie East High, Hill Top Y., Irene Kaufmann Settlement House, Clairton High, Pitt, Michigan, P. A. A., Pittsburgh Aquatic Club, Homestead Library, Duquesne Library, Carnegie Tech, Carnegie Schools, Uniontown Y., Allegheny Y., Coyne A. C., Willows Pool, Coraopolis Y. and Downtown Y.

FORMER TRAINER DIES

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—(AP.)—John Brady, once famed as a breeder and trainer of thoroughbred horses, died suddenly here yesterday in the plant where he was employed as a watchman. He was 80. Death was attributed to heart disease.

HAUS GIRLS COP

The Haus girls' bowling team defeated the Dunmeyers, of Ambridge, 2,034 to 1,944, last night.

SPORT SHORTS

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—Len Harvey, British middleweight champion, lost his second straight decision to Vince Dundee last night in the opinion of two judges and a referee, while, for the second straight time, a crowd of 11,500 booed, cat-called and protested vigorously that the Englishman had won the 12-round bout.

PINEHURST, N. C.—(AP.)—Dr. George T. Gregg, Pittsburgh, national senior champion, had no difficulty in winning the eleventh annual seniors' golf tournament here yesterday, defeating E. C. Keating, Montclair, N. J., 7 and 5. In the third division final, Lawrence Barr, Pittsburgh, defeated J. A. Sullivan, Newton Center, Mass., 5 and 4.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees have announced that Lou Gehrig, the most important holdout on the club, has come to terms. Inside information is that Gehrig signed a contract for exactly the same terms as governed his labors during the past two seasons. He has just completed a contract which brought him $25,000 annually. The new document is for only one year.

PRINCETON, N. J.—(AP.)—The athletic committees of Harvard and Princeton universities, in an official statement issued here last night, sanctioned renewal of competition in all sports except football between the two institutions.

NEW YORK.—(AP.)—George Spitz, New York University freshman, has been awarded first prize in the Rodman Wanamaker International Trophy selection, made annually, to the athlete adjudged the most prominent in the Milrose A. A. meet. Spitz broke the world indoor high jump record, clearing 6 feet 7 inches.

ABSECON, N. J.—(AP.)—Members of the National Football Rules Committee were in seclusion at the Sea View Golf Club today, poring over the playing code in an effort to discover and correct any possible flaws.

CORAL GABLES, Fla.—(AP.)—W. H. Caswell, New York, won from H. B. Rust, Jr., Providence, R. I., in 20 holes, to advance to the semi-finals of the St. Valentine's golf tournament here yesterday. Don McCallister, Miami, turned back Tom Davies, Pittsburgh, 2 and 1.

CINCINNATI.—(AP.)—Sidney Weil, of the Cincinnati Reds, denied that the ball club might be sold when informed of reports that Norman Perry, Indianapolis owner, was understood to be negotiating with him for the purchase.

MIAMI.—(AP.)—Peggy Wattles, Buffalo, won her second Miami golf crown in six days as she routed Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, 9 and 7, to win the women's tournament, yesterday.

PALM BEACH, Fla.—(AP.)—Arthur (Bucky) Yates, Rochester (N. Y.) veteran, eliminated Tommy Goodwin, New York, 1 up, in the semi-finals of the South Florida amateur championship yesterday and meets T. Philip Perkins, former British titleholder, who easily defeated William D. Langford, Chicago, 4 and 3, in the final today.

Two big upsets marked play yesterday in the City Senior League basketball race. South High coming through to unexpectedly beat the leader in Section 1, Westinghouse High, to cause its initial league setback of the season, and South Hills High inflicting a surprise defeat on the record of Allegheny which would have clinched the title in Section II with a victory. South Hills and Allegheny are now tied for the lead, with seven wins and two defeats each.

Westinghouse was nosed out by South, 26-24, and Allegheny was beaten by South Hills, 37-27.

FIFTH AVE. LOSES

In other City League encounters Peabody took the measure of the title-defending Fifth Avenue aggregation, 28-18, and Connelley Trade beat Allderdice, 22-20, in Group 1, while Langley upset Oliver, 32-30, and Perry knocked off Allegheny Vocational, 37-16, in Section II.

Latimer, Schenley, Knoxville, Fifth Avenue, South and Herron Hill copped Junior League combats.

The tilting in W. P. I. A. L. ranks yesterday was as usual very interesting. The outstanding one-sided setback was scored by Homestead High's team, which defeated Elizabeth, 44 to 3.

On the other hand, many close battles ensued. Monaca nosed out Rochester, 16-14; Latrobe beat Connellsville, 17-13; Duquesne edged out Clairton, 27-26; Edgewood lost to Oakmont, 28-26; Coraopolis toppled Crafton, 24-18; Stowe nosed out Carnegie, 24-21; Charleroi beat Donora, 20-16; Uniontown set down Jeannette, 22-19; Perrysopolis tripped Youngwood, 20-19, and Mt. Pleasant nosed out Greensburg, 24-23.

SCOTT WINS

Scott High, of North Braddock won from East Pittsburgh, 29-11; Rankin copped from Trafford, 38-15; McKees Rocks beat Dormont, 27-24; Aspinwall lost to Wilkinsburg, 26-20; Mars tripped Zelienople, 27-21, and Beaver Falls walloped Beaver, 36-13.

Har-Brack whipped Freeport, 40-12; Tarentum beat Parnassus, 30-16; Mt. Lebanon swamped Bridgeville, 36-18; Arnold walloped Springdale, 23-16, and Swissvale nosed out Etna, 15-13.

Bellevue was beaten by Ambridge, 35-22; California defeated Monongahela, 35-19; Trinity, of Washington, bowed to Waynesburg, 36-16, and Brownsville won from Georges Township, 35-16.

Ben Avon stopped Sewickley, 40-20; West Bethlehem beat East Pike, 9-8, and Butler topped Ellwood City, 29-16.

Joe Trippe Wins Over Jackie Horner

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Joe Trippe, 148½, Rochester, N. Y., won an eight-round decision over Jackie Horner, 147, St. Louis, here last night. Frank Borjorski, 134, Erie, knocked out Joey Manuel, 133, Buffalo, N. Y., in the fourth round. Jimmy Thomas, 120, Pittsburgh Negro, won by a technical knockout in the fourth round with George Sotak, 116, Cleveland. Matty Gifford, 123½, Buffalo, and Carl Scalise, 121½, Erie, fought a six-round draw.

The semi-final and main bouts were refereed by Jack Demosey, former heavyweight champion of the world.

COUNTY CHAMPS OUT TO COP

By JULIUS LEVIN

One victory separating them from the second half championship of the Allegheny County League, the Duquesne Lafayettes will make an attempt to sew up the laurels tonight when they invade Charleroi to engage Al Wildman's Merchants composed mainly of former Duquesne Lafayette players.

The two clubs have been staunch rivals throughout the County League season and promise a battle tonight that should keep their respective followers on their toes from start to finish. A victory will clinch Duquesne's right to engage Fintex in the play-off series, the latter club having won the first-half championship.

The West Penn League will present two high-class attractions, the Knickers playing at Community House, while the Schneiders appear at St. Michael's.

Monessen will be out to tighten its grip on first place in the Tri-County League by taking another fall out of Swissvale at Monessen, while in the County Amateur League, Rankin Christian Center plays at Hill Top Y.

Homestead invades Cleveland West Side tonight for an Interstate Saxon League contest, while two old rivals clash in the only Catholic Lyceum League battle, St. Joseph's, first half champion, entertaining its arch rival, St. John's, of the South Side. Mt. Washington Triangles play at Soho Community and St. Ann's at Hill Top Reserves in two Metropolitan League contests.

Two independent games find the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House in Canfield, O., to engage the Olympics of that town in a return battle while the Penn Five will be host to the Cleveland Pennzoils at Sharpsburg.

Three local courts will feature a full program of A. A. U. tournament games in the junior and boys' classes. The courts involved are those of Kingsley House, Salvation Army and Community House.

University Club vs. P. A. A., and K. A. C. vs. Allegheny Country Club at Keystone A. C.

If the crack P. A. A. squash rackets team can defeat the University Club array on the Keystone A. C. courts today, in one of the two closing matches on the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association League schedule, the Winged Head's star combination will slow away the championship for the season.

On the other hand, should the University Club team upset the dope and defeat the P. A. A. and the Keystone A. C. defeat the Allegheny Country Club, then the race will result in a three-way tie between the P. A. A., Keystone A. C. and the Pittsburgh Golf Club, each team suporting a record of five victories and three defeats.

The Winged Head team, however, is expected to win its matches with the University Club in comparatively easy fashion, so about the best the K. A. C. squad can hope for is a tie for second place with the Golf Club entry.

Pitt Swim Team Beats Case, 50-25

CLEVELAND, Feb. 14.—Pitt's swimming team retained its undefeated rating by trouncing Case natators, 50 to 25, here last night.

Two Case pool records were broken. Pittsburgh clipping 3 1-5 seconds from the 160-yard free style relay record and Case lowering the time for the 300-yard medley relay by 16 seconds. The summary:

150-yard free style relay—Pitt won (Miller, Stoffan, Cogswell, Woolridge). Time, 1 minute 21 4-5 seconds (new record).

50-yard breast stroke—Jackson (P.) won; McGrew (C.) second; Schuster (P.) third. Time, 1 minute 17 3-5 seconds.

100-yard free style—Woolridge (P.) won; Miller (P.) second; Gardner (C.) third. Time, 59.7 seconds.

100-yard backstroke—Haas (C.) won; Swanson (P.) second; Reuss (C.) third. Time, 1 minute 11 seconds.

100-yard free style—Woolridge (P.) won; Stoffan (P.) second; Hannum (C.) third. Time, 1 minute 1 second.

220-yard free style—Cogswell (P.) won; Geurge (P.) second; Cook (C.) third. Time, 2 minutes 45 seconds.

Fancy diving—Schweller (P.) won; Wilson (C.) second; Campi (P.) third. 400-yard medley relay—Won by Case (Haas, McGrew, Gardner). Time, 2 minutes 28 seconds (new record).

ROSE DEFEATS HOLT IN BOUT AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, recent tamer of Jimmy Kelly, of the North Side, with a brilliant exhibition of boxing, returned to the Moose Temple ring last night before only a fair-sized crowd and served out a beating to Billy Holt, young Negro welterweight puncher, of Homewood, in 10 rounds that were brimful of action.

Rose waged his customary alert and heady battle permitting Holt to step off to a good lead in the first two rounds and then gradually gaining momentum to come with a rush toward the finish and win in a romp. He almost knocked out the spent Holt in the last two rounds, battering him through the ropes in the ninth frame and forcing him to wrap his arms about his head to avoid punishment in the tenth.

HOLT LOSES EARLY LEAD

After the first two rounds, Holt won only one, the fifth, and that only by virtue of a right to the chin that staggered Rose and threatened to knock him off his feet. He had dropped Billy for no count with a similar right in the second round, after doing all of the forcing in the opening session.

Late in the third round, Rose began to concentrate his attack on Holt's body, and, beginning with the sixth, he rained choppy rights off Billy's jaw, alternating these sorties with his midsection work. He crowded Holt continually in the closing rounds and breezed in with the unanimous decision.

The boxing of Rose has been so pleasing in his local appearances that he merits the best sort of a break the promoters can give him. He not only is one of the cleverest ringmen to show here in some time, but also is a willing performer. He scaled 146 pounds against 144¼ for Holt last night.

Al Ghan, of Columbus, 139¾ pounds, outfought Hal Murray, Harrisburg blond, 138¾, by a perceptible margin in the six-round semi-final, forcing the going all of the way, but when Murray rallied with some good long-range punching toward the finish he received the votes of both judges, while the referee turned in the bout as a draw. It was one of the toughest semi-finals for sheer punching and roughing that has been put on here recently, with Ghan's driving attack giving him the edge.

REILLY WHIPS BURNS

Jimmy Reilly, of McKeesport, 132¾, who couldn't get going in his bout with Jackie Coogan at Motor Square Garden last Monday night, came back to put up a beautiful boxing exhibition to beat hard-hitting Sammy Burns, Hill Negro, 128½, in the second bout, and Buddy Stewart, of Canton, O., and Homewood, 143¾, won by a technical knockout over Jim Hennan, Negro of the North Side, 140¾, in the third round of the opener. Herman went down for a count of nine from a right to the body, and when he wilted under further punishment, the referee intervened.

Al Grayber refereed all of the bouts and Frank Brown and Frank Ferris were the judges and Tommy Grant and Max Zeugschmidt the timers, while Ray Eberle was the announcer and Dr. M. R. Goldman the commission physician. A collection taken up for the family of Bob Cranshaw, the Negro boxer, of Columbus, O., who died following a bout in the Moose ring two weeks ago, netted $100, to be added to almost $300, collected at Motor Square Garden on Monday night. Officials of the fatal bout have been subpenaed to appear at an investigation to be conducted by Coroner William J. McGregor next Thursday.

It was announced that Ted Yarosz and Tiger Joe Randall have been matched for the main bout at the Moose next Friday night.

RODGERS SEEKS RELEASE FROM CONTRACT

Jackie Rodgers, local Negro featherweight ring star, and his manager, Johnny Deutsch, are tiffing again, as Walter Winchell would put it.

Jackie Rodgers

Jackie wants to get away from Johnny and to this end has engaged an attorney to take up the matter with the boxing commission, which he has asked to cancel their contract. If the commission declines the attorney plans to sue to break the pact on the ground that there has been a breach of agreement.

When informed of Rodgers' intentions last night, Deutsch countered with the statement that he willingly would give Jackie his freedom if the latter will settle up their financial status at once, averring that he has advanced sums of money in handling the boxer that still are outstanding.

Rodgers, some months ago, shortly before his wedding, renewed his contract with Deutsch for one year at a time when it was reported he would go with James (Red) Mason, who for a time had an interest in Deutsch's stable of boxers. Harp Vaughan, of the North Side, is Deutsch's partner and it is intimated he may become Jackie's sole manager if the latter manages to sever the ties that bind him to Deutsch.

eer auditorium, a right nifty entry, what?

LAYDEN REFEREE

Elmer Layden, athletic director at Duquesne University, will serve in the capacity of starter and Dr. Castlemon, track coach at Ohio State, as referee.

Carnegie's Tartans hope to make it three out of three for the week by downing Georgetown tonight. The Hoyas have found the sledding very tough against tri-state district teams, and have been beaten twice by both West Virginia and Duquesne. The Washington visitors, however, appeared very formidable against the Dukes last night, and Carnegie hardly will find a setup confronting 'em tonight.

There will be no preliminary struggle, but oetween halves, a special exhibition boxing bout between Mike Restaino and Henry Carr, two members of the Carnegie varsity boxing team, will be staged. The boys are 145-pounders.

DUKES BY A NOSE

By just a single point, Duquesne raked out a victory over a fast and stubborn Georgetown University varsity on the Bluff court last night, the locals capturing the edge in a nip and tuck battle by a 28-27 count. The lineup:

Duquesne 28		Georgetown 27
Abele	F	King
Benedict	F	Morris
McGeever	C	Dillon
Stephens	G	Scalzi
Parry	G	Shea

Score by periods:

Duquesne	14	14—28
Georgetown	11	16—27

Substitutes—Georgetown, Murphy, Shea. Field goals—Abele 2, McGeever, Stephens 4, King 2, Morris 4, Scalzi 3, Shea 1. Fouls—Benedict, 4 out of 5; McGeever, 2 out of 4; Stephens, 3 out of 4; Parry, 1 out of 4; King, 1 out of 3; Morris, 2 out of 2; Dillon, 2 out of 5; Scalzi, 1 out of 1; Shea, 2 out of 3.

Team fouls—Dukes, 10 out of 17; Georgetown, 7 out of 12.

Referee—Dan Daugherty, W. and J.

Umpire—Buck Snyder, Montana.

In a preliminary, which tested the rampaging Duke freshmen more than they have been tested for some time, the Red and Blue yearlings defeated Kiski by a 32-to-22 score. The lineup:

Duke Frosh 32		Kiski Prep 22
Davenport	F	Hamilton
MacDougall	F	Laughlin
Brenner	C	Moore
Reiter	G	Marks
Moore	G	Beitner

Substitutes—Krankota for Davies, Zeller for MacDougall, Bayuser for Brenner, Venner for Reiter, Silverstein for Moore, Baker for Krankota, Cisone for Silverstein, Pollack for Hamilton, Bryant for Laughlin, Bowman for Moore, Hamilton for Bryant, Ames for Bowman, stewart for Ames. Field goals—MacDougall 2, Brenner 3, Reiter 3, Venner, Moore 4, Hamilton 2, Pollack, Moore, Marks, Beitner 3. Fouls—Duke Frosh, 8 out of 13; Kiski, 6 out of 14. Referee—Yanz, Wallace.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN,
The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXX.

Jess Willard went strictly hard-boiled after he won a popular decision over Frank Moran. He had a little money now and dealing with him for a title bout was a real job.

He hated to let a dollar escape him. He got so eggy about it that he fired Tom Jones, the man who had piloted him to a victory over Jack Johnson at Havana.

There was a flareback to this. Sports writers panned Jess for his ingratitude and Willard compromised by offering Jones a berth as advance man for his circus at $35 a week.

Jess had bought the circus outright and it began to hang around his neck with the delightful fluffiness of a necklace of anvils.

Jess began to brood about matches. If somebody only would pop up and promote something!

Just about that time Tex Rickard walked down the gangplank of a his long hunts for a fortune in South

As usual, he came back without steamer. Another of America had ended. "openers."

DEMPSEY COMES ALONG

Jack Dempsey, the unknown, who had tried to see Moran and Dillon fight as he looked over the top of the Washington Park fence in Brooklyn, had come along in startling fashion. He had knocked out Homer Smith, Jim Flynn, Bull Sadee, Tom Riley, Kid McCarthy, Bob Devere, Arthur Pelkey and Porky Flynn in one round apiece.

Tex wanted to know all about this young "feller" from Salt Lake. Why was he making so much noise? Surely he couldn't whip big Fred Fulton.

There was Tex again, running true to form, looking up at "the big fellers."

Tex was going to find out just how good Dempsey was. There were no immortals among those fellows that he had bofled over in a round, but just a little before that Dempsey had knocked out Bill Brennan in six rounds, hitting Bill so hard on the whiskers that Brennan collapsed on his ankle and broke it. At least that was hitting, and Rickard was a bit interested. But surely Dempsey could not whip big Fulton, and Tex was going to prove it.

TEX SETS STAGE

The world doesn't know this. I doubt if Dempsey knows it, but Tex dug up the money so Jack Curley, now the wrestling king, could promote the fight between Dempsey and Fulton at Harrison, N. J. Tex was certain that a victory for Fulton over this young bucko from the West would be the means of producing the next opponent for Jess Willard. That's how far ahead Tex was looking, and just then he little dreamed that he was trying to kill off the man who was to make him rich and famous again in a few short years.

I'll go a little farther when I tell you that Tex was confident Fulton would knock Dempsey kicking. He thought the same thing of Jess Willard with regard to Dempsey.

The night before the battle between Willard and Dempsey at Toledo, Tex and Jess rode around in Willard's car for hours, planning a world tour of triumph. Tex had planned many such tours, none of which came about, but in this case, Tex had the trip planned and routed and even had mapped out the poster advertising for the big splurge.

He always was dead sure, right up to the middle of that first round of the Toledo fight, that Dempsay was too small, and, when it is remembered that little 161-pound Dempsey was bucking 260-pound Willard, you hardly can blame the shrewd Rickard for thinking so. He wasn't alone in his judgment. Tex had seen Dempsey bowl over Fulton in a punch or two, but he thought it was a lucky flash in the pan.

The fact of the matter is that Dempsey's size never impressed Rickard, even when he was in there, the great terror, against Luis Angel Firpo. Rickard was a cold-blooded cuss, and he wouldn't have lost a moment in brooding over the defeat of Dempsey by Firpo or anybody else. As I've told you before, Tex had that urge to conduct a big international battle in the Argentine and he would have been tickled pink if Loote had pelted Jack out. It would have meant an invasion of the Argentine to regain the title, if possible, and that was just the break Tex was looking for.

Fulton, a confessed faker in the end, always claimed that Doc Kearns and Dempsey "double-crossed" him in that Harrison fight.

FULTON EASY VICTIM

The big plasterer would have you believe that Kearns had promised to "go easy," that there would be no attempt at knocking out. If Fulton was sap enough to listen to any such alleged promise by Kearns, he only got what was coming to him. Dempsey won in blinding fashion. In two shakes of the lamb's tail, he had Fulton flat on his back. Fulton was balancing on his spine back and forth in his attempt to arise, like the runner on a rocking chair.

Promises, expectations, double-crossing, scheming, no matter what, Dempsey was on the high road to fame and there had to be some attention paid to Jack Kearns' yowl that he had the next heavyweight champion of the world right in his vest pocket. Dempsey was wild fire!

The boxing world began to sit up and take notice, Rickard with the rest of them, but he was convinced that the time was not ripe for a world heavyweight battle. The war still was on and Tex had done enough traveling to feel that the bout wouldn't prosper. He talked it over with his friends, but there was no great demand for such a bout just then, he thought. He pretended he wasn't interested, but the old bird was looking over the field with the hungry eyes of a panther stalking for prey.

DAVIS-ELKINS VICTOR OVER AMERICAN U.

GROVE CITY, Pa., Feb. 14.—Jinx day affected both Grove City and Thiel here last night, but the Grovers had an easy time winning a listless game, 40-23. The Lutherans were away off form, and the Crimson kept a comfortable lead all the way. It was Grove City's second victory over its Mercer County rivals within a week. The lineup:

Grove City 40		Thiel 23
Fegley	F	Harter
Minnick	F	Clark
Laycock	C	Frampton
Reeves	G	McCoy
Koma	G	Bell

Field goals—Fegley 5, Ruckel, Laycock 3, Reeves 2, Koma 1, Harter 2, Clark, Petrini, Frampton 2, Barber. Fouls—Grove City 10 out of 14, Thiel 9 out of 20. Referee—Patterson.

PRESIDENTS BEATEN

CARLISLE, Pa., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Dickinson had little trouble winning its ninth basketball game in 11 starts by defeating Washington and Jefferson, 40 to 23, here last night. Dickinson led from the start, and the nearest W. & J. came to overtaking them was early in the second quarter, when the visitors pulled to within four points of Dickinson. The lineup:

Dickinson 40		W. & J. 23
Foley	G	J.
Moyers	C	Em.
Reeves	F	Rut.
Lipinski	G	Johns.
Fredericks	G	McK.

Substitutes—Potamkin, Davidson, Hatton, Mitchell, Martin, Shaffer, Dodrick, Peters, Potamkin 4, Myers 2, Dodrick, Fredericks 2, Joy, Smith 3, Hampton 2, Neil. Foul goals—Dickinson 11, W. & J. 11. Referee—Killinger.

D. & E. VICTOR

ELKINS, W. Va., Feb. 14.—(AP.)—With Peters at center amassing 10 field goals and seven free throws in eight chances, Davis and Elkins turned back the invasion of American University, of Washington, 48 to 37, here last night.

LONDOS MAT VICTOR

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—(AP.)—Jim Londos, Pennsylvania claimant for the world heavyweight wrestling title, threw Rudy Dusek, of Omaha, Neb., last night after almost 49 minutes of rugged battling.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Girls Must Be Friendly to Get Boys' Attention

Why can't Peg land 'em? She's pretty 'n' peppy. She wears swankly clothes 'n' she's a bang-up dancer. She has oodles of girl friends, and the boys seem to like her . . . but they never ask her out! Why? Maybe you'll be interested in the reason.

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I wonder if you'd help me? I'm awfully puzzled and bothered and I just can't figure out what's wrong. I am a girl almost 18 years old. I have been working a year as a stenographer. I have a lovely home, and almost everything I want. But still I am so worried I don't know what to do. I do hope you will be able to help me.

'Ugly Duckling'

"I have never had a boy friend! What do you suppose is the matter? I have always had lots of girl friends. I am president of a girl's club, and they all seem to like me. I am a good dancer (I have been coaching six local shows lately), and I am considered nice looking, and I have nice clothes. Please don't think I am conceited. I am not, but I just wanted to give you the picture.

"I really don't know what to do. Everyone in the club is sorry for me, and I hate pity. I have never wanted a boy friend before. I didn't mind not having one, so long as the other girls didn't. But now they all have them, and I seem to be the 'Ugly Duckling' of the club. The boys always come after club meetings to take them home, and I always have to just 'tag along.' It makes me sick, and I can't imagine what the trouble is.

"I even overheard two of the girls talking one night and what do you suppose they were saying? Just this: 'Gee! What is the matter with the boys? They all like Peg, but still none of them ever ask her out!' How do you think I felt when I heard that? Terrible! Just terrible.

Puzzled About Self

"Now, please, Sally, don't tell me to wait and the right one will come along. Because I'm not looking for the 'right one.' Any nice fellow will do, just to have someone to take to club meetings and parties.

"Please don't think I throw myself at fellows, even if I do want one to go around with. I don't. I just act nice to them, but it doesn't seem to get me anywhere.

"Oh, I do hope you can help me. If you can't, I think I'll just quit going out at all. I can't stand being just a tag-along. What's wrong with me? Do you know?

"WORRIED PEG."

Do I know what's wrong with you, honey?

Yes, I suspect I do. And you'll probably be surprised when I tell you, but judging from your letter here's the trouble.

You are actually not interested in boys, as living human beings, at all. You don't really see them as friends and chums. You're only interested in yourself, and in having a handy what-not to use at parties to save your face with the rest of the girls.

Now, I ask you, honestly, why should boys like a girl like that? Will you tell me? A girl who wants to use them, but actually doesn't know they're alive? Boys like girls who are warm and sincere and friendly—girls who flirt with them a little and tease them a little and may love them a lot some day.

Must Be Friendly

The chances are, you think boys are something strange and different from yourself. They're not. They're Just Folks, like yourself, whereas, you're only thinking of them as conveniences. Learn to give them their rightful place in your life. Because they have a place there—a far more thrilling and important one than just taking you to parties. And it's as natural for a healthy girl to be interested in them as it is for her to draw her breath and eat. And when you realize that, and begin to treat them accordingly, they'll ask you out, never fear.

You're popular with girls because you're really interested in them. You feel a real friendliness and comradeship for them.

Learn to feel that boys are live friends and comrades, too. Learn what interests them and why. Learn what their hopes and fears and dreams are, and sympathize with them. You won't need to ask questions. All you'll have to do is forget yourself and your own troubles and anxieties. Tell them they're good eggs and you're interested in what they have to say, and then listen.

Be regular and friendly and you won't have to worry about dates.

THE SAME OLD STORY

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

The same old story, never somehow TOO old, changed very little in the staggering ages that have passed over the world and changing many other things out of all recognition, this same old story doesn't go out of fashion—with boys and girls, and men and women. It only changes in aspect—as clothes and manners do—perhaps not even as much as that! For it is told with almost the same words that the first man used—or tried to.

Most of us are mighty happy that it's true—it makes the world still a delightful place to be in. The Prince, in the violet satin with diamonds at his knees and lacey tie, silvered hair tied with black velvet, a snuff-box forgotten, drew the same picture for a girl's bright eyes that the young chap in a double-breasted dark blue suit—a tie with a dash of red and buff—with heavily-stitched shoes weighty as a driver's footwear, his dark hair short, a pretty-accurate wristwatch, and a world of ambition, draws for a star-eyed girl now. The picture is always just we two—always happy—the cold world shut out—a LITTLE house—a kiss when he goes and comes—a peaceful Sunday—and they lived happy forever after!

There are scores of young lovers who draw this simple picture for some maple-sugar girl—and mean to make it all come true, to be faithful, to be honest, to work just a part as hard as they would at any other much-desired destiny. World's a nice place—hey? "Betcha!" says Cupid. NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Don't Expose a Child to Whooping Cough.

Whooping cough is a disease considered by most mothers as a normal happening of childhood. This is the wrong attitude to assume, for too often the disease proves more serious than was expected. It is not safe deliberately to expose the child to whooping cough.

Dr. Copeland

The disease is easily passed from one child to another. It usually lasts from six to eight weeks. It runs through three definite periods, in the first period it resembles very closely an ordinary cold with a cough. It is very difficult at this time to say definitely that the child has whooping cough. This period lasts about two weeks and during this time the cough gradually increases and pretty soon becomes quite severe.

In the second period the cough becomes very annoying, stronger and occurs at definite times. It is easy to recognize the disease at this stage because of the characteristic "whoop." The third period of whooping cough is described usually as the "decline" of the disease. The cough now becomes less severe and gradually disappears.

Whooping cough in young children is dangerous in that it often leaves the child less resistent to other diseases. More emphasis should be placed upon this disease than has been in the past. As I have suggested, this is particularly true in regard to the prevention of the ailment. This disease is too dangerous to infants, delicate children and those having latent tuberculosis. Every effort must be made to prevent it.

There is a good deal of skepticism as to the value of the whooping cough vaccine. There are many doctors, however, who believe the disease may be prevented by the injections. If given to a child before exposure to the disease, it may be prevented in many instances, they believe. The injection is simple, painless and causes no discomfort whatsoever. The treatment may be obtained from any local physician or your local health officer.

It is worth while to use this treatment in a community where whooping cough is prevalent. If it is to be used, it should be given regardless of whether the child has or has not been exposed to the disease. We can never tell when such exposure will take place, and it is always best to be on the safe side.

MISS A. M. B. Q.—Why is it that some persons operated on for toxic goitre can be so thin while others are so heavy?

A.—This is entirely individual—each system is different.

* * *

L. B. Q.—What would be responsible where there is an odor from the ear? I had running ears when I was younger, but have not been troubled in this way for a long time. Could the tonsils be the cause? What would you advise?

A.—May be due to several different causes. If the tonsils are diseased they should be removed. See a specialist for examination and proper advice. It is unwise to allow a condition of this kind to go on without giving it careful attention.

R. E. B. Q.—What causes cracking joints?

A.—This is usually due to lack of synovial fluid. Massage the parts with warm cod liver oil before retiring.

Madge Is Puzzled About Mary's Changed Attitude

My first astonished look at Mary was involuntary, and I quickly schooled my face to composure. Whatever had happened between her and Noel to cause her pettish little outburst—"Don't call it my party!"—it was the part of wisdom to ignore it.

"Well, then, call it mine," I said, laughing. "Anyway, I need your advice, so come with me."

"Gladly," she said, and there was the flick of a whiplash in her voice as she rose and came toward me. I saw Noel's hand go out toward her in an appeal that I guessed was involuntary, for the next instant he had dropped it to his side again as he stood punctiliously to await our passing from the room.

"Please tell Mrs. Underwood that I am in the dining room if she wishes to see me again before going over to Mrs. Briton's," I said, and I hardly heard his low-toned courteous assent, so engrossed was I in getting Mary out of the room before the explosion of her temper which I guessed was imminent.

"Why is a man, anyway?" she sputtered almost before I had closed the door of the Underwood apartment, and I unlocked the door of our own room and drew her inside before I answered. I felt that I needed the extra time to control my laugh muscles, for her plaint, delivered in tragic tones, was irresistibly funny.

"That's a question every woman asks at some time or another in her life," I told her. "Fortunately the anger which makes them ask it rarely lasts long enough for them to get a real answer."

"It'll last long enough with me," she muttered rebelliously. "But I'm not going to bother you about it, Auntie Madge. I promise to stand without hitching for two or three hours, anyway, so take me along to the dining room if you want to. And—I'm sorry I said it wasn't my party when you've been so perfectly adorable about everything for me. I fancy you've guessed, though, that that particular little spiel was for Noel's benefit."

"Yes, I surmised something of the sort," I told her, smiling, as I opened the door again and ushered her into the corridor. I was relieved to see Lillian emerging from her own door, for I wished no further discussion of Mary's grievance, whatever it was, until she should have had time to rein in her temper.

"Noel said you were in the dining room," Lillian said reproachfully, but with a smile quirking the corners of her mouth.

"We're on our way there," I told her. "I only spoke of it to Noel for fear you might want to give me some message before you left."

"No, nothing on the old bean at present save the price of subdeb evening frocks," she retorted. "You'll be around the hotel the rest of the day, won't you?"

"I don't expect to leave it again," I answered. "All my errands except telephone ones are finished."

She spread her hands and made me an elaborate bow, while I thanked my particular joss for an empty corridor.

"Lady, take my hat," she entreated. "Efficiency, thy name is—"

"Please keep quiet," I entreated in a low voice as the elevator stopped at our floor.

"As you wish," she said with pretended hauteur, and preserved a lofty air during our descent. As we left the elevator she said with ostentatious dignity:

"Mary, will you please convey the information to your high-born relative that she will receive a telephone call from a worm of the dust as soon as said worm finds out what are the colors of the evening gowns, or has any other information which the aforesaid high-born relative ought to hear?"

She turned abruptly and walked regally to the door without a backward glance. Mary giggled outright, the elevator man choked back a chuckle, and even my exasperation could not keep back a wry smile of my own. A second's reflection banished any possible annoyance, for I knew that when Mary could giggle she could harbor no rancor, and that her resentment against Noel, whatever is the cause, would soon be dissipated.

We went into the dining room, almost deserted at this hour, and spent a quiet quarter of an hour with Mr. Seibel. At the end I stood up with the assurance that every detail of the arrangements for Mary's party with the exception of the decorations would be complete without any further thought on my part.

"I shall be back at 2 o'clock when the decorator and the flowers arrive," I told Mr. Seibel.

"We shall be ready for you," he said with a deferential but confident little bow, and Mary hardly waited until we were out of earshot before exclaiming:

"Honestly, Auntie Madge, I can't tell which knows how to fry the onions best, you or Mr. Seibel. Mrs. Underwood sure had the right dope when she called you—"

"Hush!" I whispered peremptorially as we went through the swinging doors to the lobby, almost running against Purnell.

"Mr. Graham is on the wire in the booth," he explained hurriedly. "I was just coming into the dining room after you."

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

Wrinkles come when the soft underpadding of the skin loses tone, or when the skin is drawn into lines through facial gestures. The more oil the pleated complexion receives, the better. Tap briskly because it helps the skin, tissues, fibres to function properly.

That woman who carries herself like a queen carries an insurance against the ravages of time. Physical education is not only a benefit to the inner organs and the musculatory structures of the body, but beautifies the complexion, helps the hair to grow thick and lovely, puts firelight into the eyes and assists the beautifying work in every way.

Instead of having a collection of uninteresting frocks hanging in her wardrobe, Missus Wise Owl confines her selections to a few robes and has them top-notch. The silly day is gone when a woman cannot appear again and again in the same lovely dress. One might as well throw out one's furniture and rugs after a certain time. Some women don't feel happy in outer garments until they have been worn repeatedly, and they have taken on something of the personality of the wearer, a new tilt here, a tuck in there. A woman and her costume should be fond of each other.

Household Hints

Rub some ordinary soap on the edge of the drawer that is inclined to stick.

Salt sprinkled over carpets just before sweeping will brighten the colors and prevent moths.

When putting away sonny's suits after laundering, button the vestee into the blouse and the trousers onto the blouse. Then when in the usual rush for kindergarten or school there will be no search for different parts of the suit.

A large-figured calendar with pencil attached is indispensible in the kitchen; any special duty for the near future may be jotted down. Time and effort will be saved by the housewife who has a schedule for her work, even if she doesn't follow it to the letter.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Arranging the Party of Bridal Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married soon and my husband-to-be would like to have his married brother for his best man, as his wife is to be matron of honor, but my friends think this is improper. Is this true? The groom has no other brother that could act as best man.

2. I am having two bridesmaids and one will have to walk out of the church with the best man, which is objected to, too.

EVA.

1. Indeed, far from being improper, this seems to be the perfect arrangement. That is, provided the one person in the world whom you wish to have for your matron of honor is the wife of your fiance's brother, and that the one person in the world that the groom-to-be wishes to have for his best man in this married brother. Such a wedding party is a charming arrangement.

2. The objection in this case I "sustain" too. Nowadays it is supposed to be most out-of-date and uninteresting form for the members of the wedding party to be "paired." Except for the fact that the bride and groom walk down the aisle together, the other units of the wedding party walk as they did in the recessional, but in the reverse order. The maid of honor, or matron of honor, walks alone, following the bride and groom. Then following her come the bridesmaids, walking together, two by two. And last the ushers, walking together, two by two. The best man does not walk in the recessional, going directly after the recessional has started to the vestry, where he gets the groom's hat and coat to take to the car at the front of the church.

Drawing Room Behavior

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When newcomers are constantly appearing in a room must the gentlemen rise each time a lady enters or leaves?

JACK.

Yes, a gentleman rises in a small gathering (such as a few people, say about six) when a lady enters the room. For instance at an intimate tea party. At a large function, say 20 people or more, a gentleman rises if a lady or another man joins his particular group. He reseats himself after the lady is provided with a chair.

If there is no chair for the other man, the first gentleman either remains standing also, or helps the newcomer to find a chair. The first gentleman need not withdraw from the group at the arrival of the second, unless he thinks that he has sufficiently monopolized a popular young woman's attention. In that case, he withdraws if he feels inclined to give someone else a chance. The same rule applies to a lady or gentleman leaving a small gathering or a group.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

These hard times family problems spring up like saucy little mushrooms and they have to be handled cheerfully.

A fine young woman writes me that she is much troubled over her family situation. Her father is getting old and he can't find work. Her husband can't keep two households going, so she has found a job.

The thing that distresses her, she says, is that it looks like a long, hard pull and that she will probably have to go on caring for them until the children, three brothers, grow up. She thinks maybe they will all marry too young, and still leave her holding the bag.

Now see here, Miss New York, you are becoming a deep dyed pessimist, and at your age, anything might happen to anybody any day. Remember that. Nobody knows why we are given burdens to bear, but it's a grand burden to help your loved ones, and you say you love them dearly. If your husband doesn't care if you work and understands your problems, why worry?

When those boys are old enough to work, and have a fair education, let them work. They can help certainly. Get the going to college idea out of their heads until their parents are "out of the woods." They can go to college and work their way through if you are willing to put up cash for the care of the parents, but responsibility is good for boys and will make much better men of them.

I think you are laying too much stress on luxuries for the family under conditions that exist there. Give them the necessities and let them earn the luxuries. They are young yet and your parents are not very old. You didn't mention your own children, or haven't you any? If you have you aren't doing right to pamper the brothers at the expense of your own.

Now don't get "broken-hearted" over a little poverty. There are much worse things in the world. Read about some of them in the papers and then draw a deep sigh and go to work with a lighter heart. Your people are honest and decent, and there are three boys who may amount to something if you make them go to work as soon as they are old enough to help.

"Don't be "humiliated" because of poverty. I often wonder if these people who jump out of windows over stock market losses ever stopped to think of the disgrace heaped upon some families, and to realize that poverty is NOT a disgrace. The way you take it can be a disgrace, but don't you let it be that way with you. Cheer up and face it like you have faced other problems. Life's just a series of them, changing all the time. Interesting, isn't it? Then why brood?

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 15

Sunday's horoscope shows a degree of turmoil and confusion aggravated by indulgence in a proclivity toward quarrels, rashness and intemperance of speech and action. This aggressive and violent tendency may have the result of involving danger to contracts, writing or business connections. The finances are also imperiled.

Those whose birthday it is may experience a year of disruption, turmoil and confusion, precipitated largely by a tendency to impetuosity, rash and quarrelsome behavior.

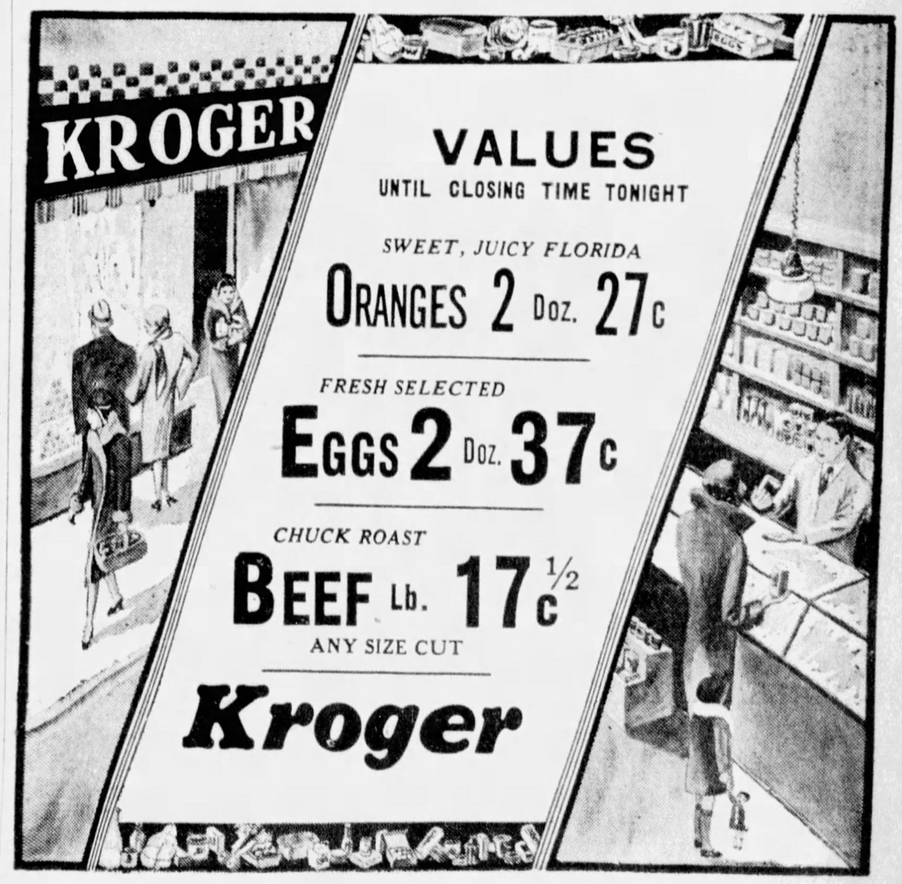
A child born on this day may be quick and clever, but it may require early training and discipline in the matter of integrity equanimity and self-control, else it will jeopardize its career through enmities and retaliation.

Monday, February 16

Monday's astrological forecast is an interesting one, promising a sudden visitation, which may cause change of environment, interest and personal associations. A loosening up of congestions may make way for new projects and adventure, which will prove of unexpected benefit. The personal affairs may likewise flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a pleasant and profitable change, with a stabilizing of the fortunes following the removal of some old obstacles to success. The personal affiliations will be particularly fortunate and happy.

A child born on this day should be well equipped for a happy and successful career, despite a disposition to be free and prodigal with its substance. It will be ingenious, clever and industrious as well.



My Experiences in the World War

By JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

GEN. PERSHING URGED FOCH AS CHIEF

Argument Won Allies to Supreme Command; Tells Of Clash With Petain

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in The Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Secretary Baker and I had frequently discussed the question of a supreme Allied commander, and we were both ready to accept it in principle when proposed. Apropos its probability, Secretary Baker, March 30, 1918, cabled President Wilson:

"I have just been shown a copy of a message from Lloyd George to you with regard to Gen. Foch and American troops. The situation seems to be that Lloyd George is personally in favor of a supreme commander, but fears British opinion will be the other way, because such a commander could sacrifice the channel ports to the defense of Paris.

"The arrangement therefore is that Gen. Foch is to be supreme enough to co-ordinate, but without being called supreme commander. Gen. Pershing will, of course, act under Gen. Foch, as Petain and Haig have agreed to do.

"I venture to suggest that in replying to that part of Lloyd George's message you might go further than he asks and say that we are willing to accept a general supreme command whenever the French and British are.

"Perhaps the relative smallness of our present force and our having no immediate defensive object in France would make it unwise for us to urge the point, though the present events would seem to have demonstrated the need.

". . . Gen. Pershing's prompt and fine action with regard to the use of our troops and facilities here in the emergency has won enthusiastic commendation from French and British. Our 1st Division will shortly be withdrawn from trenches and used in battle."

AMERICAN TROOPS IN THE TRENCHES, READY AND EAGER FOR IMMEDIATE ACTION

Gen. Pershing.

Asks Wilson's Approval

The substance of Mr. Lloyd George's message to President Wilson is contained in the copy of a message, dated March 29, sent by Gen. Bliss to the Secretary of War and me, as given below:

"The following has been handed to me by the military representative of Great Britain and is transmitted for the information of the Secretary of War and Gen. Pershing:

"Secret. From the Prime Minister.

"Subparagraph A.

"Please communicate to Gen. Bliss that I have cabled to President Wilson asking him to approve of Foch exercising the same — — — authority over the American Army as he is exercising over the British and French. To send men over to France with the utmost possible speed to make good losses and to agree to arrangements made by Gen. Pershing to their being brigaded as they become available with French and British divisions for the duration of the crisis.

"Sub-paragraph B.

"The Prime Minister thinks that before this fighting is over every man may count, and he can see no other way of making splendid American material available in this crisis of the war. (Sgd.) BLISS."

Lloyd George

In response to a notice from Prime Minister Clemenceau I went April 3 to Beauvais to meet the Supreme War Council. This curious old town, not far from the active front, has much of historical interest. Arriving early, Col. Boyd and I strolled about and visited the cathedral, and then had to wait an hour at the Hotel de Ville before M. Clemenceau and Lloyd George came into the conference room. Marshal Haig, Gens. Foch, Petain, Sir Henry Wilson, Bliss, Weygand and myself were the others participating.

Gen. Weygand

Foch Explains

Brig. Gen. Spiers acted as interpreter and Lieut. Col. Sir Maurice Hankey, who usually accompanied Mr. Lloyd George as recorder. The meeting was finally called to order by M. Clemenceau, who stated its purpose, saying in substance:

Sir Maurice Hankey

"We have come together to settle a very simple question regarding the functions of Gen. Foch. I think we are all in agreement as to the co-ordination of Allied action, but there is some difference in the understanding of Gen. Foch's powers as conferred upon him at the Doullens conference of March 26. Gen. Foch will explain his difficulties."

Gen. Foch then set forth briefly his situation, as follows:

"The powers conferred by the Doullens conference were limited to the co-ordination of action between the Allies. They were conferred while the action was on. The power to co-ordinate has been construed to be limited to the time the Allies were in action. That was March 26 at Doullens. Now we are at April 3.

"Now that the two opposing armies are no longer in action but have stopped and are facing each other, there is nothing to co-ordinate. There should be authority to prepare for action and direct it. So we are right back where we were, and, nothing can be done until an action starts again."

Unity Wanted

Mr. Lloyd George then entered the discussion, saying substantially:

"We have had more than three years of this war, and we have not had unity of action during that time. During the last year we have had two kinds of strategy, one by Haig and another by Petain, both different, and nothing has been gained. The only thing that was accomplished was by Gen. Nivelle when he was in supreme command.

"The Germans have done exactly what Gen. Nivelle tried to do. The Supreme War Council that met in February adopted a plan for handling a general reserve, but through the action of those concerned nothing has come of it. It is a nullity.

"What has happened recently has stirred the British people very much and must not happen again, as the people will demand why it has happened, and somebody will be called to account. They want some sort of unity of command.

"Gen. Foch is now empowered to co-ordinate the action of the allied armies, but this does not go far enough, as he has no control except by conferring with the respective commanders-in-chief. He wants authority to prepare for action. I think the resolution made at Doullens should be modified so that we may have a better understanding. I should like to hear what Gen. Bliss and Gen. Pershing have to say."

Gen. Foch

Pershing Favors Foch

I then gave my view, which was set forth in a brief memorandum prepared in pencil after the discussion began, as follows:

"The principle of unity of command is undoubtedly the correct one for the Allies to follow. I do not believe it is possible to have unity of action without a supreme commander. We have already had experience enough in trying to co-ordinate the operations of the allied armies, without success. There has never been real unity of action.

"Such co-ordination between two or three armies is impossible no matter who the commander-in-chief may be. Each commander-in-chief is interested in his own army, and cannot get the other commander's point of view nor grasp the problem as a whole. I am in favor of a supreme commander and believe that the success of the allied cause depends upon it.

"I think the necessary action should be taken by this council at once. I am in favor of conferring the supreme command upon Gen. Foch."

When I had finished, Mr. Lloyd George came over to where I sat, took me by the hand, and said:

"I agree fully with Gen. Pershing. This is well put."

Mr. Lloyd George asked for the views of Marshal Haig, who said:

"We have had practically complete unity of action. I have always co-operated with the French, whom I regard as in control of the strategical questions of the war. I was placed directly under the command of Gen. Nivelle, and Gen. Petain and I have always worked well together. I agree with Gen. Pershing's general idea that there should be unity of command, but I think we have had it."

Objection Found

The views expressed by Gen. Petain were practically the same as Marshal Haig's, although I think they both realized the necessity of some definite co-ordinating control.

As a result, after some further informal discussion, a draft of the resolution was submitted which omitted reference to the American Army. Whereupon I called attention to the oversight, saying:

"I think this resolution should include the American Army. The arrangement is to be in force, as I understand it, from now on, and the American Army will soon be ready to function as such and should be included as an entity like the British and French armies."

"There is no American Army yet as such," Gen. Petain interjected, "as its units are either in training or are amalgamated with the British and French."

"There may not be an American Army in force functioning now," I replied, "but there soon will be, and I want this resolution to apply to it when it becomes a fact. The American government is represented here at this conference and in the war, and any action as to the supreme command that includes the British and French armies should also include the American Army."

Foch Given Power

The foregoing account of the conference may not be an exact record of the language used, but is given as my aide took it down.

The following resolution was then read and adopted:

"Gen Foch is charged by the British, French and American governments with the co-ordination of the action of the Allied armies on the western front; to this end there is conferred on him all the powers necessary for its effective realization. To this same end, the British, French and American governments confide in Gen. Foch the strategic direction of military operations.

"The commanders-in-chief of the British, French and American armies will exercise to the fullest extent the tactical direction of their armies. Each commander-in-chief will have the right to appeal to his government, if in his opinion his army is placed in danger by the instructions received from Gen. Foch."

The idea of an Allied commander-in-chief had been suggested and discussed many times unofficially, but for various reasons, political and otherwise, it had never been definitely adopted by the Supreme War Council. With the distrust that existed among the Allies, it was not easy to bring about the decision in favor of a supreme commander, and it was made possible only by the extreme emergency of the situation.

It was natural that the position of supreme commander should fall either to a French or a British officer. An American could hardly have been considered for the one reason, if for no other, that we then occupied no front of our own and our force was still relatively small.

While the two Allies should have realized the necessity for closer co-operation, yet the sentiment in the armies and among non-combatants of each against selecting anyone from the army of the other was difficult to overcome.

Individual Views

The British held that the channel ports must be defended at all costs and feared that this might not be fully appreciated by a French Allied commander. The French were compelled to protect their capital and were uncertain of the attitude in that regard that a British supreme commander might take.

These obligations were, of course, important, and each was considered vital by the governments concerned.

The common objective of their combined forces, however, was the German army, though this fact was apparently often obscured by the individual point of view of each of the Allies. Previous to this crisis they did not seem to realize fully that the success of their common cause demanded complete unity of action both on the offensive and defensive, and that without it they could not win.

Human nature is the same whether it be regarded as affecting the actions of individuals or of nations. The subordination of a national undertaking of any kind to the authority of another nation can hardly be thought of except under the most pressing necessity.

In this case national pride entered to an unusual degree. Although we were face to face with the greatest crisis of the war, none of the governments concerned was willing to place its army absolutely under control of one of the others. This was shown in the Beauvais resolution by the limitations placed upon the authority of the Allied commander-in-chief. He could co-ordinate the action of the armies and determine the strategy, but each commander-in-chief was alone responsible for the proper tactical direction of his own army.

Success More Probable

The right was given each one to appeal to his government in case there was any interference with this prerogative. It was the safeguard against the identity of any of the armies being disregarded. While the powers of the Allied commander-in-chief were thus defined, yet under the agreement as adopted, unity of action was secured as far as was necessary for full co-operation, and the independence and initiative of the respective armies were protected.

M. Clemenceau

The designation of Gen. Foch as commander-in-chief of the Allied armies in France was proposed by the French. April 15 I received a letter from M. Clemenceau advising me that Mr. Lloyd George had approved the suggestion, and asked if I agreed. I replied in a personal note expressing my agreement, subject to the confirmation of President Wilson, which came April 17.

Once the question of supreme command was settled the co-ordinated energies of the Allied armies could be directed with maximum effect toward a common end. While dark days were still ahead, we were spared the chagrin of inefficiency through lack of teamwork.

With unity of command and the still more important fact of almost unlimited American reinforcements looming on the horizon, the chances of Allied success were much improved.

Dissatisfaction Voiced

Yet scarcely had the appointment of Foch been announced than considerable outspoken dissatisfaction among the British began to appear. One newspaper, the Globe, supposed at that time to represent the views of the British high command in the field, said:

"Our objection to a generalissimo (which we believe to be shared by our readers and by practically all Englishmen outside the war cabinet and its press) remain. They are not so much military as political. Any generalissimo is the servant of the state that appoints him. Consequently such an office involves (the possibility) that the Allied army passes under the control of foreign politicians.

"* * * Indeed the feeling on this side of the channel is so strong that we may safely assume that the appointment of that honored soldier, Gen. Foch, as generalissimo, is a temporary arrangement for the present operation, and as such it is as welcome in London as it is understood to be at G. H. .."

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated olive colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Houdon Statue Of Washington Worth Millions

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A fortune stands in plain view in the Virginia capitol.

It is the Houdon statue of Washington.

Gov. John Garland Pollard has ascertained that collectors would pay $5,000,000 or more for this statue beneath the rotunda.

Washington, himself, viewed the work and approved it.

Mary Returns Pearls After Jim Marries Kitty

CHAPTER LX.

Connie looked at Garson in amazement. "Jim's not in his room?"

Garson shrugged. "That's how it is."

"Do you think he could be—"

"There's no telling about two people as crazy in love as they are," Garson said, his face set. "I don't know what we can do about it, though."

Connie sprang to her feet; a quiver of indignation ran through her form; her face was pale.

"I know what I can do!" she said. "Oh, I'm broadminded as anybody—but she doesn't know what she's doing. It isn't fair—he takes advantage of her love . . ."

She marched directly toward the stairs, despite the reached-out, detaining hand of Duke Garson. "Wait a minute, dear, after all, it's their own affair—"

There was revealed to him, for the first time, something of the quickly determined streak of conventionality that was Connie's heritage. Beneath the surface, hidden by the gloss of the modern age, it was evident that she had strict and definite ideas of right and wrong, an unspoken but steel-like devotion to what might roughly be described as duty.

Accompanies Connie

"You can come with me if you like," she said.

Together they ascended the stairs.

"I'm going to look in Jim's room," she said, outside the door.

"He isn't there."

Nevertheless she turned the knob and walked in.

"Jim," she called, softly, but there was no answer. Touching a button she flooded the room with light. The bed was untouched.

"I'll find out about this!" she murmured [illegible]

Cutting off the light, she left the room. "Not under this roof," she whispered, coldly.

In front of Kitty's door she hesitated just a moment and then rapped softly. There was no response.

"I'm going inside." She had her hand on the knob.

"I wouldn't." Garson protested. "What good do you think you could do? My ideas and yours are about as important as leaves blown in a storm."

"We'll see."

No nicety of scruples, now, bothered Connie at all; she was not quite herself; her actuating motive, Garson decided, was anger—cold, biting resentment toward Jim Tracy. This protective feeling among women, one for the other, obliterated so much that was polite and civil in the face of tragic situation the little conventional customs of courtesy melted, were dissipated like mist.

Marriage Revealed

Connie pushed open the door and stepped across the threshhold. One head was on a pillow and another more closely cropped, Jim's, on the other pillow. They were asleep.

"KITTY."

Connie's voice rank like cold steel and the sleepers awakened instantly. Kitty raised her head and then sat up, stretching her arms.

"Oh, hello, Connie. You found us, didn't you? Hello, Duke!"

"Kitty—" Connie's voice stopped, inarticulate.

"Oh, don't get excited or anything, please." Kitty's voice, sleepy, but dramatic, commanded. "You're just a couple of foxes, aren't you? If you are looking for the wedding certificate, you'll find it there on the dressing table. Jim and I didn't go to the movies at all tonight. We had a little session with a country preacher—and what do you think of that?"

In the semi-glare of the room, it was almost dark. Jim Tracy sat up with a grin on his face.

"It just had to happen, folks," he declared. "I got a wire today that my General Refrigerator stock was skyrocketing and I sold at top market. At last I've got a real stake and, believe me, I didn't waste a single day in marrying my girl. Honest, though, we were both scared to tell anybody—stage fright, I guess. Do you think I am a blighter, Connie?"

All power of speech was restricted, paralyzed in Connie's throat.

"Well, I was a blighter—no doubt about that," Jim Tracy declared, with a quiet satisfaction and a new, substantial timbre in his voice. "I got off on the wrong foot two or three times, but, gee whiz, something new has happened to me. Believe me, with a girl like Kitty for a wife, there won't be any more kinks! I've been walking on air the last week—every time I turned around I shook hands with a miracle—"

"Save it for tomorrow," Kitty suggested to him. "Remember, I'm a bride, and don't I get a little privacy? I told you to lock that door."

"Kitty . . . I'm glad . . ."

Garson had her by the arm.

"You'll have to forgive us, Kitty—Jim," he said, in a strange tone. "We both are just a couple of saps. For heaven's sake, LET'S GET OUT OF HERE—"

In the hall outside Connie was white, speechless.

"You go downstairs and wait for me," Garson told her, forcing his voice to be brusque. "I'm going upstairs and unlock Mary Smith's door."

When he returned to the library Connie's face was buried in her arms and she sobbed slightly with a tremulous motion that no man could understand. Garson held something in this hand that clicked slightly, as he put it, a small heap of shimmering whiteness, on the table.

Returns Pearls

"Poor Mary Smith—" he said, quietly, "when I told her they were married she gave up the pearls without a murmur. I think she was really glad to get rid of them—and maybe her heart is not as badly broken as she imagines."

Connie lifted her face, but her eyes avoided him. "Duke—do you think Jim will make her a good husband—that he can be trusted?"

"No man is a complete hero and no man is a complete villian—at least, men like Jim Tracy," he told her, simply, out of the wealth of his experience. "Tracy's on the right track now, and I'd say it's a twenty-to-one shot that with Kitty behind him his streak of strength will spread till it crowds out his weakness. You can't judge a man by his worst traits—you've got to bet on the best stuff that's in him. He won't get very far off the reservation—with Kitty. I have enough faith in that girl for anything. She'd make a man out of a wooden Indian, and Jim Tracey something more than that. We've got to give him some credit."

Tears flooded Connie's eyes and she reached up with her hands on his shoulder, clung to him.

"Why do you cry, dear?" he asked with tenderness.

"Because — because — Oh, Duke, I'm so happy!"

THE END.

DAILY TRUE STORY — 'Three-Star'

Horace Knowlton swung up the four steps into the Elite Lunch Wagon.

" 'Lo, Peaches," he said.

Mayme Bland reached under the counter to the dessert shelf and brought out a saucer of canned peaches which she set before Horace.

"What's this?"

"What you ordered—peaches."

"Aw, come now, Mayme—"

One of the two men down at the end of the counter laughed and Horace became embarrassed. He hadn't seen them when he dashed in.

"Some coffee and sinkers, too," he ordered.

"I didn't order them peaches, Mayme," he protested.

"That's what I understand."

"I just said 'Hello, Peaches.' "

"Oh! Well, then, 'Hello Prunes.' "

"You think I'm kiddin', Mayme. I'm onna level. I'm gonna marry you."

"Well, Horace, if you ever get to be a minister and I find the man I want I'll let you marry me to him."

"Yeah? Come now, lay off the funny stuff. You know I'm crazy about you, Mayme."

She polished the big coffee urn and said nothing.

"I'm makin' plenty now, don't forget that. We'll be on easy street. Lissen, Mayme, I'll come and get you tonight. We'll go to a movie and I'll have a swell ring for you."

Horace reached out and captured one of Mayme's hands. The door opened, Mayme snatched her hand away.

A tall, sunburned chap wearing a good looking blue suit and a ten-gallon hat came in.

"Sister, I want a double portion of hamburger with plenty of onions and some java," he said.

"Right," Mayme answered.

The young man ate his hamburger and drank his coffee. He left a quarter tip.

"I'll be this way again in a couple weeks, sister; have some more of that hamburger ready for me."

Accepts Invitation

"You bet—brother!"

Both of them laughed and the stranger went out.

"Gee," Mayme muttered, "now there's a regular guy."

And the tall young man under the 10-gallon hat turned uptown, as directed, toward the bank as he was thinking that this red-headed girl was as attractive an eyeful he had ever seen.

Mayme didn't feel in the mood for going to the movies with Horace that night and she didn't feel in the mood to accept his ring, so she begged off with the old headache excuse.

Horace was around early the next day and showed her the ring.

"Jab your finger into it, Mayme, and we'll be engaged," he said.

"I got to think that over first," Mayme insisted.

Mayme was still thinking it over two weeks later when the tall young man with the ten-gallon hat came in again.

"Hello, sister, may I—"

"Hamburger? Double order with plenty onions and java? Sure, brother!"

"Good girl," he said.

They talked about this and that.

"My name's Tom Gates," he said. "I live down in Tutlow and I never made any girl want to slap my face, so how about going to a show with me tonight?"

"My name's Mayme Bland and I don't see anything to prevent going to a show with you, Tom."

"Thanks, Mayme."

Horace Knowlton was lounging in the barber shop window when he saw Mayme Bland strolling past with the strange young man under the 10-gallon hat.

Horace hurried out and started after them. They went into the Royal Palace Theater together.

Horace scowled.

It didn't make him feel any better to see Mamye and the tall young stranger come out together and to hear them laugh.

Horace followed a few steps and got quite close.

Gates Apologizes

"Hey, Mayme, a word with you," Horace said.

Mayme turned in surprise. The tall young man also turned suddenly. He bumped into Horace and put out his hand to save himself. His hand hit the rim of Horace's tilted derby, jammed it in his eye and made it fall off. The tall young man, Tom Gates, stumbled, muttered an apology and tried to pick up the hat, but only managed to put his foot right through it.

Mayme howled with laughter.

"Sorry, brother, mighty sorry," Tom muttered. He winked at Mayme, she took his arm and they walked away while Horace stared at the remains of his derby.

Every week or so Tom Gates seemed to have business in South City. Horace saw him there and it always meant that he remained over night and took Mayme some place or other.

Horace went into the bank one forenoon to deposit some cash. He was depositing quite a lot these days, some in his own name but most of it in his widowed sister's name. It was graft money, all right, but the bank people had nothing to say to that.

This time he saw Tom Gates talking with Mr. Simson of the bank. Simson, Horace knew, kept a well stocked cellar and entertained rather lavishly.

"Yes, sir—my three-star is making me quite a fortune, Horace heard Tom saying.

"It's good stock, Mr. Gates, no question about that," Simson agreed.

"Best there is and I sell it straight—no watered stock for me."

Horace sauntered out and hurried to the Elite Lunch Wagon.

"Well, I had a hunch you'd be sap enough to let yourself in for a jolt, Mayme," Horace said. "That four-flushing galoot with the ten-gallon hat Tom Gates, is just an ordinary bootlegger. He's been boasting about his three-star stuff. I know all about it. He's makin' it himself and pretending to run it over the border."

"Honestly? How dreadful," Mayme agreed.

"Never mind. I'm going down to his place tomorrow and clean him out. I'll confiscate everything and see that he gets about a year, locked up."

"How thrilling," Mayme said. That night Mayme took a train for Tutlow. It was late when she got there. A man agreed to drive her out to the Gates place, far from the railroad station.

The driver managed to rout Tom Gates from his sleep.

"Tom," Mayme whispered. "Get busy, hide your stuff. Horace Knowlton is a dry agent and he's wise to you stock of three-star. He's coming down with a crowd nov to raid you."

"Three-star raid me? Well, I'm a pop-eyed Cupid if you aren't the gamest and whitest girl I ever saw. Stick around and watch, Mayme."

"I must hide so they won't know I tipped you, and please get out or something or they'll lock you up for a year."

"You come right in here and wait, Mayme. I'll send Aunt Patty down to keep you company, sort of chaperon—"

Marries Tom

"I don't need any chaperon with you, Tom—"

"Here they come," he whispered.

Horace arrived with five of his men.

"Show where that three-star is you've got cached," Horace demanded.

"My three-star stuff is out on the ranch, Mister — all first grade cattle—see this—"

He exhibited a cattle brand three stars.

"Take a look about the place; you'll see that I'm telling the truth. Miss Bland and me have got to drive over to Parson Jerome's right now to get married," Tom told him.

"Three-star cattle brand—I thought it was brandy. I thought—"

"Keep on thinking," Tom suggested. They drove over to Parson Jerome's. When Tom Gates and Mrs Gates, she that recently was Mayme Bland, got back, Horace and his dry raiders were gone.

Confession Writer's Confession

A Continuation of the Intimate Ups and Downs of an Imperfect Lady.

The author's 141st love—Arthur Ballentree.

Editor's Note — Today we wheedle a few more confidences from the girl who is trilling the details of her rapid fall to success as a confessions writer.

By "BENT BLOSSOM."

I hope the young girls who read my story will not get any wrong notions.

I would like to have it strictly understood that anything I say is for art's sake. I want to be a confessions writer to help others—and if I have stumbled on life's highway I was always quick to pick myself up.

I have been instructed by the Confessions Editor to say that there is no fun, no lasting joy, in carrying on first with one man and then with another.

I am no prude, but let me tell you, girlies, that the way to have real fun is to stay home with your Radios. Or curl up with a good confessions magazine. Make fudge! Pop popcorn! You can be so happy with the little things in life. (Pooh Pooh pa Doop). Learn to make faces at men when they approach you with that glassy look in their eyes. Gather up your skirts and run like everything.

That is my message to girls, and now that I have delivered my message, let me tell you about the swell guy I trusted Arthur Ballentree by name.

A Serious Scandal

Mayor Kline Does Not Seem to Appreciate Gravity of Charges Against Succop—Comment on Local News.

Revelations of the last week in regard to the manner in which Director Succop has been managing the Department of Supplies—revelations taken from the public records—have created a serious scandal. Mayor Kline appears to lack appreciation of the gravity of the charges. He grudgingly admits that the department may be "in a rut," and talks vaguely of changing its bookkeeping methods.

It is not a question of bookkeeping methods that is involved in the accusations—it is a question of common honesty. Director Succop has been charged with flagrant breach of the trust reposed in him. He has been charged with deliberately evading the law in awarding contracts for the purchase of supplies for city institutions. He has been charged with wasting thousands of dollars of the people's money by unlawfully purchasing goods from high bidders who had won his favor.

Since contracts are supposedly awarded with the Mayor's approval, it is questionable, to say the least, if the inquiry into the charges should have been delegated to the Mayor by Council, in the first place, and if the Mayor should have assumed the responsibility, in the second place. He has prejudiced the case further by holding secret hearings. There will be time enough for secret hearings when and if the grand jury investigates.

The memory of the people sometimes seems to be short; but Mayor Kline is deceiving himself if he thinks this thing can be hushed up and will soon be forgotten. Public sentiment has been aroused over the matter to a greater degree than the Mayor and Council apparently suspect. Thousands of citizens have just paid their city taxes, and it has been considerable of a strain to many of them to make the payment. It is not hard to imagine how they feel on being told Succop has squandered thousands of dollars of their money.

Mayor Kline has injured his standing with the people by his efforts to minimize and suppress the scandal. If he wishes to regain public confidence, he should conduct the inquiry openly or ask Council to conduct it. Better still, let him ask the District Attorney to investigate. As invariably happens when the attempt is made to hush up a public scandal, rumors are flying thick and fast. They should be thoroughly sifted.

It is not inconceivable that Mayor Kline's political future and the estimate that historians of Pittsburgh will form of his administration depend on the course he follows during the next few days in respect to the charges against Succop and those associated with Succop in the alleged irregularities. By taking a bold stand in favor of cleaning up the mess, by frankly laying the facts before the public, and by refusing to protect his appointees if the evidence shows they have been unfaithful, Mayor Kline has it in his power to recover the esteem of the people.

Pittsburgh is the only city absent and unaccounted for in the crime statistics of American cities with population of over 100,000, just published by the Department of Justice. The table has received a great deal of publicity through Chicago's joyously and loudly calling attention to the fact that 67 other cities have more crime. Pittsburgh and New York furnished no reports, but New York's police commissioners promised one later. The reticence of our own Police Bureau appears in a bad light. Does Supt. Walsh wish to imply that Pittsburgh has no crime?

Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the state police, feels it is desirable to disclose the extent of crime in Pennsylvania on the theory that publicity will create sentiment in favor of more energetic action to prevent it. He told a group of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association Thursday that crime costs the people of this state more than $21,000,000 a year. Maj. Adams believes that with more state police it would be possible to prevent much of the crime now committed. As things stand now the force is too small, he says, to do much else but pursue criminals after they have done their wicked deeds. Certainly the prevention of crime is infinitely to be preferred to mere prosecution of wrongdoers.

Ever since the Liberty Tubes were opened the question has been asked if they are as safe for motorists as they should be. Early in the history of the tunnels a traffic jam resulted in a number of persons being overwhelmed by noxious gases. From time to time alarming predictions have been made as to what would happen in case of a prolonged tie-up of cars in the tubes during rush hours. The Highway Safety Committee of the Pittsburgh Motor Club has just written to the county commissioners recommending 10 things that can be done to avert these perils. It is to be hoped the commissioners will act promptly on the proposals, eight of which have been indorsed by the county director of public works and the city traffic engineer.

The Sun-Telegraph commends the good sense of the couples who did not let the silly superstition of Friday the 13th deter them from applying for marriage licenses yesterday. The very fact that they have brains enough not to be influenced by such nonsense augurs that they will make a success of their marriages.

Several cases have come to public attention lately in which persons have been imprisoned for debt. This recalls the horrors of the debtors' prison depicted by Dickens in one of his novels and brings to mind the revulsion against imprisonment for debt that was aroused by the book. A bill has been introduced in the Legislature to stop the practice. It is important, however, that there shall be careful distinction between cases in which persons go into debt through no fault of their own and cases in which they deliberately set out to defraud their creditors.

There is a treat in store for admirers of beautiful and interesting paintings in the twenty-first annual exhibition of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh at Carnegie Institute. The local painters' show does not have the glamour that surrounds the International exhibition, yet to the layman many of the canvases will be found just as satisfying as the pictures hung in the more pretentious show.

Apropos of pictures, the Bureau of Mines an- nounces that it now has 700 sets of movies, totaling 2,100,000 feet of film, at its Pittsburgh experiment station on Forbes street, available for exhibition before engineering and scientific organizations, civic and business associations, clubs, churches, miners' unions and schools. Some of the films are "thrillers," showing explosions and daring feats. The educational service that they perform makes it desirable that they shall be exhibited widely. Everyone ought to see the one-reel film "Carbon Monoxide—the Unseen Danger."

Striking Changes in the Falls! -:- By Nelson Harding

The Trust was in his private bath,
Or so he seemed to think,
Until disturbing things began
To happen on the brink.

And now there's something on his mind
Which strikes him forcibly,
Reminding him the Falls are not
His private property.

SPACE—A BAFFLING MYSTERY

By Archibald Henderson

Man is restricted to a very small special range. It is a zone, about eight miles through, surrounding the earth and including a tiny layer of the surface of the earth. Within that zone he may walk, run, ride, fly, swim—whether alone or in a vehicle, car, airplane, dirigible or submarine.

Although as yet limited in special movement to this comparatively small region, man is free in thought; and he may soar in imagination throughout the entire cosmos. He is endlessly curious, and is constantly seeking to learn of the universe which lies all about him.

Everything seems for the nonce to resolve itself into motion waves and energy. Although this table at which I write is apparently steady, it is really flying through space, and I along with it, at a dizzy speed.

The light by which I see to write is coming to me at the highest known speed—186,000 miles per second. I turn on the radio, to listen in, as I write; and the sound from the instrument has been transmitted through the ether at precisely that same speed—the speed of light or of radio waves.

Through the ether, do I say? And what is this curious substance? Is it a matter of air or atmosphere or an electrical field? Perhaps we should at least divest our minds of all material ideas in thinking of the ether. And yet there is some intimate (as yet unknown) relationship between matter and ether. Larmon has ingeniously suggested that matter may, after all, be only a local singularity or peculiar structure of the ether.

All about us lies space, the limit of which has never been found. It is natural to assume that space is infinite in extent, that however far we might go in a given direction we should never reach any barrier or stopping place. But do we know this? One of the subsidiary consequences, although not essential to the validity of relativity, is that space does not have a limit, that it is finite in extent. There is, however, no bounds or barriers to it, even in this theory—just as there is no barrier to progress on the surface of a perfect sphere.

Which of the theories shall we chose? Perhaps neither; for now a new theorist, the Abbe le Maitre, has come forward and advanced the notion that space itself is not stationary, but is expanding—as demonstrated by the excessively high velocities of spiral nebulae far out in the remoter reaches of interstellar space.

A deeper scientific synthesis is on the way. In his notebook, which contained his reflections on nature and her infinity of secrets, Faraday once recorded his suspicion that all the great forces were somehow united—matter, energy, electricity, magnetism, gravitation.

In pursuance of this deep, unitary principle, Einstein, the great physicist, is now in this country, informing himself regarding the physical and astrophysical findings of our famous scientists—Millikan, Michelson, Adams and their associates. Perhaps in the near future this mighty merger may be effected, and all life brought into harmony with the mysterious forces of nature.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Sick of life?

Lost your interest in everything?

Feel there's no use in trying? One day's just like another—and what does it all amount to? Life's a mess. So day after day, you sink deeper—

Yet, even as you sink, you hate yourself for it. Hate yourself and everybody else. Why must this happen to you? Why can't you love life, as you did once? Why can't you be eager and excited? Why has this dreadful limpness settled over you—settled even over your thoughts, sifting down like gray dust—blurring everything?

If only you could feel alive again—get out of this depression—

You can! You can get out! But first you'll have to understand how you got in.

"That's easy enough to explain," you say. "I'm all run down. I worked too hard. And I had trouble. People hurt me. I lost my money. And there was a big sorrow. Someone I loved—went away. That's how I got this way."

No, it isn't. Trouble and sorrow and hard work didn't make you this way. Trouble and sorrow and hard work are a normal part of life. We can live as vigorously after they come as before—if we take them right. But you didn't take them right. You didn't go on living after these things came to you. You stopped living. You shut life out. You shut yourself in, on yourself. And then you began a horrible, cannibalistic practice of living on yourself.

Do you know what happens when a man stops eating? That man begins to live on his own body. The hungry body consumes its own excess fat. If the man's very fat, that's all very well—for a while. But pretty soon he begins to weaken. Little by little he uses up his reserves. Then, instead of becoming healthily hungry, a dreadful lassitude sets in. He loses his appetite. He doesn't want to eat any more. He only wants to lie still, sink deeper and deeper into apathy. He gets queer notions. He wants to be left alone.

Actually, he is dying because he is eating himself up. And, if he continues to refuse food, he starves to death.

That is what happens to a starving body—and exactly the same thing happens to a starving mind.

Bodies are fed on food. Minds are fed on thoughts, ideas, new experiences, contacts with other human beings. Minds starve as surely as bodies, if they are not fed. And the symptoms are much the same. For a while the mind that has shut itself away from life can live on its own reserves—like the body that has shut itself away from food. It can feed on its memories, its own speculations. But soon used-up thoughts no longer nourish the mind.

Indifference comes creeping, like a paralysis, over the brain. It grows tired, despondent, blurred. It no longer desires life. It is sick of life. It is eating itself up. The thing that peers from the dull, listless eyes is starving to death.

Is this happening to you? Then what's the cure? Stop starving. Feed yourself. Bring new interests into your life.

Fight on! Make yourself go through the motions of living as you make an invalid go through the motions of eating. Never mind if life doesn't taste good—if it arouses a strange nausea in you. Force yourself to meet people. Force yourself to work, to play, to go places—to fight again, hope again, love again. And presently, those gestures which were painfully, drearily mechanical, will become easy and natural and unconscious. And you will be well again—and feel the joy and wonder of life running through you.

IT CAN BE DONE.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Memory . . . A Miracle

He was a lad of eighteen years
And she half child, half maid;
Both unaware of life and tears,
Both joyous, unafraid.

One summer noon upon a hill,
So far, so long ago,
Hands clasped, they heard a creaking mill,
Saw life below them flow.

As nodding flower turns to flower,
Swept by a sudden wind,
So youth to youth in that bright hour;
Childhood was left behind.

They kissed, but never met again . . .
An old man stands today
And hears a creaking mill's refrain,
See lowlands far away.

Then out of slow decades' dim mist,
Across the marching years,
His memory brings that noonday tryst,
His long-dead youth appears!

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Love and Learn

In the "garden of girls," most men are looking for a species of morning glory, which blossoms under the sun of a smile, clings without clutching and SHUTS UP of its own accord.

* * *

A beauty treatment is always a sort of moral uplift to a woman; but, somehow, a clean shave, a clay-pack and a bright new manicure always seem to smooth a man's way for a little sentimental skidding.

Some men appear to shed marital responsibility as a snake sheds its skin—just glide right out of it and forget it.

* * *

A woman crosses every bridge forty times before she gets to it—but a man never even thinks of crossing a bridge until it is about to be washed away.

* * *

It's a wise woman who gets somebody outside of the family to teach her how to drive the motor-car. It is better to kill a few chickens than to kill your husband's love.

* * *

Why will a girl work so hard to turn a friend into a lover, when the miracle of happiness consists in turning a lover into a friend.

* * *

After you've been married three weeks you begin to plan for your wedding anniversary. After you've been married three years, you have to put a cross mark on the calendar to remember when it is.

When you are very young, you dream of taking a man by storm, dazzling him, bowling him over; when you are a little older, you know that it is wiser to creep up on him, and steal into his consciousness subtly and insidiously, when he is off his guard.

The surest way to lose a man is by demanding more devotion than he wants to give—and the quickest way is by giving more devotion than he demands.

Isn't It So?

The price of liberty often depends upon the humor of the judge.

A clean bill of health never carries the demand "please remit."

A nagging church has about as much influence as a nagging woman.

Power for Everybody—

Or the Power Trust?

FREE, OR—

Gov. Roosevelt's clean cut attitude toward the Power Trust is in great and refreshing contrast to President Hoover's attitude.

Gov. Roosevelt demands electric current for the people of his State at REASONABLE RATES, and unless all signs fail he is going to GET IT for them at reasonable rates.

He has outlined a sane, sensible program of water power development for New York and has held the club of public ownership over the power companies if they refuse to come to terms.

He sees no reason why New Yorkers should pay two or three times more, or five or six times more, than Canadians pay for the same electricity, derived from the same river.

And he has not been backward about saying so.

That is how matters stand in New York under Gov. Roosevelt's leadership.

Let us see how they stand at Washington under President Hoover's leadership.

Not long ago President Hoover appointed three new members to the Federal Power Commission.

The first act of these members—or at least of their chairman—was to DISMISS two trusted employes of the commission who have been fighting the Power Trust for years.

The offense of these two employes was in attempting to prevent the Power Trust from stealing water power properties that rightfully belong to the people.

And out they went as soon as the new power commissioners took office.

The Senate of the United States has voiced its dissent to these high-handed proceedings by withdrawing its confirmation of the new commissioners, but later confirming one of them and taking to the courts the matter of its power to reconsider its confirmation of the other.

The administration, however, insisted on keeping them. Apparently it is more interested in protecting and extending the privileges of the Power Trust than it is in promoting or safeguarding the rights of the people.

That is how it looks, certainly—and the pictures above show how it looks better than a column of words or a volume of statistics.

Shall the nation's power resources be free to work for the nation, or shall they be handcuffed and put to work for the Power Trust?

That is the issue. In New York, Gov. Roosevelt says they shall be FREE.

In Washington, President Hoover doesn't say anything much, but after thinking it over, you can draw your own conclusions.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—At my time of life someone would suggest a raccoon coat. It was pointed out they were not only worn by college boys but by grownups—men of affairs such as Otto Kahn, his brother Agha, actors, explorers, bootleggers and other potentates.

I'm the sort who believes all the poppycock I hear. Nobody ever took the trouble to explain the facts of life. Anyway it is fun believing things. To this day I am moved to tears by a St. Bernard dog. It's the result of that Third Reader story.

Remember? old Rover misses his master while a snow piles up. He whimpers a bit and plods on through the shrieking night, locating him 15 miles away buried under a drift. He digs him out, topples him across his back and away they go to a warm fireside. Good old Rover! Or maybe it's Fido.

Secretly I have been waiting a chance at a raccoon coat but thought it best to wait until the college crape wore off. If I bought one during the height Mr. Hearst or somebody might send me back to Yale. I only needed to hear elders were taking them up.

And I lit a shuck for a clothing store. "Something Christmassy in a raccoon coat!" I told the clerk, airily as though the hot blood of youth ran fast and I was far removed from castiron deers, music boxes and heavy flannels in the winter time. "For yourself?" he inquired unshagging his eyebrows."

"Certainly"—there was no turning back. I had gone too far—"Don't you keep them for grown ups?" He said they did but somehow didn't put his soul into it. In fact I detected a sly wink at a fellow clerk as he waved: "This way, please!"

What I wanted was something long, roomy, protective. All my overcoats are short, dinky and split up the back. I needed one that would trail the ground, smell like a timber wolf and from which I could shoot out my head or withdraw it, turtle fashion. I got it.

* * *

If I know great-coats this was a honey. When you got into it you didn't walk, you barged—like Old Ma, the Ringling elephant, swaying and lumbering into the arena. When I looked at my hands they seemed canary claws, and my feet could pass for those of a Singer Midget. When I walked before the array of mirrors the clerks gathered around. And I heard a craning customer inquire: "What does he do—advertise cigars or something?"

* * *

Never did I imagine a raccoon coat could inspire such street tittering. For years I endured hoots of spat jeerers, but compared to—I must have my japery—raccoon shouters they are a picnic. I hadn't cleared the doorway until a smartie cracked: "Paul McCullough without his straw hat!"

* * *

To change from a light-weight seersucker to a raccoon without practice is not easy. In two blocks I worked up a perspiration. At the fourth block I was steaming. And at the end of the sixth, wobbly. Things began to swim, and there was a ding-donging in my ears. There were several blocks to go, but I determined to carry on bravely—the McIntyres are like that except around Easter. But the world was growing blacker. The sky line didn't look any bigger than Passaic's. Finally I reeled against a bill board. Out of the fog came a far-away voice: "Anything the matter, buddy?"

"Nothing important," I gasped weakly. "Only I'm slowly suffocating. Tell the folks to keep stiff upper lips just as though I were right with them."
